WITHOUT PAIN OR DANGER.

We respectfully call the attention of the public to the following statement of facts: For the past four years we have devoted our ENTIRE PRACTICE to the manufacture and administration of Nitrous Oxide Gas for the PAINLESS EXTRACTION OF TEETH, and for other minor surgical operations. In that time we have operated for 20,000 people without an accident of any kind, and have yet to learn of the first case of injury to any person that could fairly be attributed to the gas. We use from one to three hundred gallons daily, and never administer it except in the greatest purity.

We claim to have better facilities for making this operation successful than any others in this City. Making as we do a specialty of extracting teeth, we would be happy to convince any who have tried it elsewhere and experienced pain from the operation or disagreeable sensations, that when rightly administered and an experienced operator to extract the tooth, there is absolutely no pain, and not the slightest disagreeable sensation while inhaling the gas.

NEW-YORK DENTAL ASSOCIATION,

No. 956 Broadway, Corner 22d-st.

The following is an extract from a letter published by the COLTON DENTAL ASSOCIATION when Dr. HARBROUCK was their operator in 1869: "Our extractors are practical dentists. By devoting their whole attention to exercising they acquire a dexterity and skill in removing the most difficult roots and teeth that are really surprising. Dr. F. HARBROUCK, the operator at this office, is a pioneer in the use of the gas, being one of our first operators in New-York City. His long experience in this business has rendered him one of the best operators in the country."

The effect of the gas on most persons is very pleasant, or, (to use the expression of many of our patients,) delightful. There is no sickness or nausea felt after inhaling it, as is felt after breathing chloroform or ether.

The gas was first used as an anæsthetic by Dr. HORACE WELLS, of Hartford, Conn., in 1844, and to him alone is due the honor of originating this wonderful agent for the relief of pain.

By long experience and great care in the manufacture of the gas, we always have it chemically pure. Many of the thousands that we have administered it to have been nervous, delicate people, and some have been afflicted with heart and other organic diseases, and by care and judgment in administering it to such, we have never had one single accident.

THE POOR CHILDREN'S FUND.

Final Statement of Receipts and Expenditures by the Treasurer.

Total Amount of Money Received to Date, $19,296 75.

Expended for Excursions and Relief, $15,818 01.

Cash Balance in Hands of Trust Company, $3,478 74.

Interesting Resume of the Entire Fund Movement.

We today present a complete and final statement of the Poor Children's Fund, the receipts and expenditures, and some interesting details of the work performed in the excursion and relief movements. The accounts herewith given are published exactly as they appear on the treasurer's books, the last week's expenses being given in detail. It will be seen that the total amount of money received for the fund from July 4 to Sept. 11, inclusive, a period of sixty-nine days, was $19,296 75. Of this amount there has been expended the sum of $15,818 01, thus leaving a balance in hand of $3,478 74.

In order that the contributors to the Fund may gain some idea of the scope of the entire Fund movement, we have collated some interesting statistics. The number of contributions received was 1,983, in amounts ranging from ten cents to over $1,000. The number of individual contributors is largely increased by the fact that several of the same sent in were contributed by two or more persons, the total number being, as near as can be ascertained from the 1,461 letters in our possession, fully 2,382 persons. There have been eighteen excursions given in nine weeks. The number of persons taken on these excursions was as follows:

| | Children. | Adults. |
|---|---|---|
| First excursion | 566 | 45 |
| Second excursion | 860 | 64 |
| Third excursion | 1,109 | 122 |
| Fourth excursion | 723 | 48 |
| Fifth excursion | 963 | 86 |
| Sixth excursion | 818 | 57 |
| Seventh excursion | 961 | 200 |
| Eighth excursion | 602 | 45 |
| Ninth excursion | 804 | 103 |
| Tenth excursion | 1,323 | 61 |
| Eleventh excursion | 1,439 | 161 |
| Twelfth excursion | 811 | 88 |
| Thirteenth excursion | 809 | 73 |
| Fourteenth excursion | 1,245 | 103 |
| Fifteenth excursion | 1,662 | 227 |
| Sixteenth excursion | 1,407 | 49 |
| Seventeenth excursion | 1,507 | 97 |
| Eighteenth excursion | 1,460 | 174 |
| Total | 18,672 | 1,793 |

Of these 1,793 adult, two-thirds were parents in charge of infants. The total expense of these eighteen excursions was $10,634 97. The pro rata expense for the 20,465 persons cared for was fifty-two cents. The following are the items for provisions and refreshments needed on these picnics: 5,840 loaves of bread, 2,628 sponge-cakes, 185 hams, 192 tongues, 1,445 pounds of beef, 488 pounds of butter, 2,914 quarts of ice-cream, 2,386 quarts of milk, 36,000 pounds or ice, 19 boxes of lemons, 3,225 pounds of sugar, and 550 pounds of candy. There were two special railroad trains, fourteen barges and one steamer chartered and paid for, a third special train being contributed free of expense. It has required the services of from ten to fourteen persons to prepare the food and serve it to the children each day. A band of music has also been furnished on each occasion, and paid for on sixteen picnics, free bands having furnished on two excursions. Beside these expenses there were many minor items found necessary, which cannot be enumerated for want of space. In order to serve out the food several hundred plates, mugs, saucers, spoons, boxes, tubs, &c., had to be purchased, the rate of hiring being found to be too expensive. A large amount of printing was also found to be necessary. Of utensils purchased we have the following articles on hand, the residue left from breakage and other accidents: 815 teaspoons, 228 tablespoons, 848 mugs, 275 ice-cream saucers, one large coffee and tea urn, one ice-hatchet, one box-opener, three steels, two carving knives, five tubs, four large platters, one tea-kettle, six tin dippers, one water boiler, one charcoal furnace, three water-pails, two sugar scoops, two tin basins, one tin sullender, three small waiters, and a stencil plate and brush. All of these have been properly stored for next season. Their probable value is about $175.

In the relief movement the details of the work are, if possible, even more interesting. As has been already announced, the entire City was divided into four districts—the east-side, west-side, up-town and down-town districts. There was also a special relief account kept to fulfill the wishes of contributors. The east side district was organized on July 14, under the control of Mr. George Calder, Superintendent of the Rivington-street Lodging-house, whose district embraced the Fourth, Seventh, Tenth, Eleventh, Thirteenth, Fourteenth and Seventeenth Wards. During the fifty-five days' operations of this district there were twenty-six volunteer visitors employed, with four special visitors, whose expenses were paid. The total number of families visited was 23,680; doctor's visits, 976; families supplied with food, 734; children supplied with food, 2,019; children who received medical relief, 309; adults who received medical relief, 48; patients restored to health, 288; patients died, 6; still under medical treatment, 54. Mr. Calder also paid the funeral expenses of six children, procured the admission of several invalids to hospitals, provided employment for a number of destitute men, women and boys, distributed a large quantity of food specially contributed, beside giving away 500 palm-leaf fans. Mr. Calder, in closing his report, acknowledges the great assistance he has received in this work from the missionaries and visitors of the City Mission, the Methodist, Baptist, Port Society, Cornell and other missionary organizations. The amount expended by Mr. Calder was $1,455 07.

On July 22 the West-side District was organized and placed under the supervision of Rev. Alvah Wiswall, of St. John's Church, who associated with him in the work the members of St. John's Guild, sixty in number, all of whom volunteered their services and paid their own expenses. The territory embraced in the West-side District was the Fifth, Eighth, and Ninth Wards, and all that portion of the Fifteenth Ward lying west of Broadway and below Fourteenth-street. Mr. Wiswall, in his final report, gives the following statistics: Whole number of visits, 10,089; total families assisted, 229; total individuals, 1,077; total visits by Dr. Thurman, 256. The amount expended by Mr. Wiswall was $619 26.

On July 22, the Down-town District was organized under the control of Mr. Charles O'Conor, Superintendent of the Newsboys' Lodging-house. His field of work included the First, Second, Third, and Sixth Wards, and although he was unable to secure a full corps of visitors, the amount of work performed by him was a gratifying one. His report states that there were 1,891 visits paid during the forty-six days of his organization. Dr. Merrill paid 186 visits gratuitously, making his contribution to the fund $97 50. The number of children relieved was 1,316, with 141 adults and 389 families, at a total expense of $619 74.

On July 29 the Up-town District was organized under the superintendence of Rev. Stephen H. Tyng, Jr. This district embraced all that portion of the City lying within Fourteenth and Seventy-ninth streets, the territory being divided into two divisions and fifteen districts, each under the control of a Deputy Superintendent. The number of visits made was 17,839, by 34 visitors and they found 845 families needing relief. There were 1,799 children relieved and 64 families we relieved. The four physicians employed made 541 visits to the sick, and there were 347 gratuitous visits made by Drs. Stroudsh, Buckholtz, Buckley, Adams, McQuesten, Sweeny, Kemp, Bradley and Howell, making a total of 1,791 medical visits. The total expenses for the district were $2,218 64, which included traveling expenses of the visitors, which were necessarily large as property covers the territory.

Beyond those already named, very few of the persons engaged in carrying out the details of the work are known or by name. They, one and all, labored zealously and gratuitously greatly to the success of the excursions and relief movement in obtaining our supplies we were assisted by Dickinson Bros., Hanson Bros., Bogert & Bogert, Morris Bros., the Empire & Erwin Manufacturing Company, Patterson Bros., Burtis & Co., Dunnington & Burch, S. T. Gherardi & Co., John Gray & Co., Seck & Snyder, Wynkoop & Hallenbeck, Francis Hart & Co., Jack & Fuller, John Tufts, John Brown & Co., W. Ewd. Gould, Maxwell & Fayerweather, the Washington Ice Company and Fraser & Leslie gave whatever was required in their line at much reduced rates. Mr. H. B. Crossett, from whom the barges and steamers were chartered, made a total reduction of $300 on his usual rates. The Long Island Railroad Company made a deduction of $125 on their train, for the first excursion, and the Delaware and Lackawanna Railroad deducted $300 from their regular rates for the Boonton Excursion, and the Southside Railroad, of Long Island gave a free excursion train for the ninth excursion. The Brooklyn Ferry Company and the Hoboken Ferry Company, gave a free passage, to and fro, for the children, on the ninth and sixteenth picnics. The managers of the New-York Juvenile Asylum gave their band for three excursions. Major Blunt, of Governor's Island, also sent the post band to escort and accompany the newsboys. On the last twelve picnics the Governor's Island Band, under the direction of Prof. Stigler, have given their services at nominal rates. These facts show how the expenses of the excursions have been kept far below the average rates.

Comments of the Press.

From the Chicago Tribune.

The fact that there is a soul of good even in things that are evil, is pleasantly illustrated by the philanthropic course of the NEW-YORK TIMES in providing picnics for the poor children of that City. On last Wednesday the seventeenth excursion of this series took place. Over 1,500 boys and girls, some of whom, before they been in the country, were taken where they could romp and bathe, and play to their hearts' content. The TIMES has received, to defray the expenses of these trips, nearly $20,000, and has a large balance on hand. Its course has caused similar enterprises in Chicago and elsewhere, and is thoroughly philanthropic and praiseworthy.

From the Hartford Courant.

The NEW-YORK TIMES managers have finished for the year the poor children's picnics, and furnished a brief account of the work accomplished. This has been of two kinds—getting out of excursions and the visitation of poor families. From the account published it appears that there have been eighteen excursions, in which 20,465 persons have been taken out of the City. Of these nearly 3,000 were adults, and most of the latter were mothers in their charge. The total expense of these trips was $10,608 63, about half a dollar for each person. In the City more than 50,000 families have been visited, more than 7,000 hungry people fed, and nearly 2,000 cases of sickness received medical attendance at an expense of about $5,000, making the total cost of the Summer's work $15,608 10, leaving a balance of the fund on hand of $3,688. This is the work expressed in figures. In a decidedly decreased mortality among the children, the excursions gain in figures above their benefits. But beside of the plain facts that can be counted and calculated, there are a multitude of happinesses that these excursions have afforded which cannot be put upon paper. Cheerless homes have been brightened, hope had been revived among the friendless and despondent, and in innumerable ways the charitable spirit of these efforts has made itself felt and appreciated. Besides the work in New-York, the example has been followed in Boston, Philadelphia, Worcester and several other cities. So that really the TIMES is the founder of the whole system. Too much cannot be said in its favor. It is one of the most practical and successful charities recently thought of. It amounts to far more than a contribution to the pleasure of the hour. It is of a moral and physical benefit, and its effects are more than momentary. All the praise that may be conferred upon the managers of the TIMES cannot equal the satisfaction they must feel in having suggested and organized such a great and good work among the poor.

From the Evansville (Ind.) Journal.

The series of excursions for poor children in the large Eastern cities, which were originated by the NEW-YORK TIMES, have been productive of great good. There has been a remarkable freedom from accidents, and it has already been noticed that the rate of infant mortality has been perceptibly diminished by the operation of a charity which has been the means of taking into the country many thousands of children who never enjoyed a day of hearty and healthy pleasures in all their lives before. The TIMES deserves the thanks of the entire country for inaugurating so noble a charity. We dare say all large cities will make preparations next Summer to imitate the good example of New-York and Philadelphia in this particular.

From the Elizabeth (N. J.) Monitor.

There have been a novel and interesting feature of benevolence this season past, and quite a feather in the cap of the NEW-YORK TIMES, which must have the credit of having started them. It showed both heart and sense thus kindly to think for the recreation and comfort of these generally forlorn and wretchedly situated young creatures. Nobly were the appeals made for this object responded to, and many little hearts made happy thereby for a few hours. We met a returning excursion of this kind yesterday, which filed along in orderly style, and with some boyish jubilation and noise, at least. We hope, and those troops of rather rough-looking young citizens hope, to have the same good thing repeated next year.

From the Pittsfield (Mass.) Eagle.

It was a happy thought of the NEW-YORK TIMES to suggest a series of excursions for the poor children of the City. The suggestion met a hearty response from benevolent citizens, who have contributed in round numbers $20,000, and this week the seventeenth children's picnic has occurred. Each excursion has taken out of the City about a thousand children, allowed them to breathe the fresh air of the country, furnished them with ice-cream, cakes, sandwiches, lemonade, milk, &c., luxuries of which most of them were as innocent as they were of green fields, flowers and singing birds, and above all has given them a holiday which has impressed them with new ideas of God and humanity. A band of music has accompanied each excursion and the whole thing has been so systematized, that while the greatest freedom has been allowed for romping and enjoyment, no serious accident or obstreperous conduct has marred the enjoyments. The pro rata expense for each individual has been only a trifle over fifty cents, and we question whether so much similar pleasure was ever furnished for so little money. A balance of over $3,000 now remains in the hands of the TIMES Treasurer to be dispensed in future picnics, or in some other way for the benefit of the poor children.

All honor to the TIMES for the institution of picnics for the benefit of poor children.

From the New-York American Artisan.

One of the most pleasant events, or we should say series of events, that brighten our City annals this year is the succession of poor children's picnics, given under the auspices of the NEW-YORK TIMES. To the proprietors of that journal the poverty-stricken juveniles of the lower parts of the City owe a debt of gratitude which will not soon be forgotten. The cordial manner in which the efforts of the TIMES have been seconded by contributions from private persons, and by free fares on ferry boats and railways, is a credit to the City and to humanity. Sixteen of these excursions have now been made, and thousands of children who never before saw a green field or breathed a breath of pure air, have had their hearts gladdened by the beautiful sight, have been treated to a feast of fat things, and have learned that, notwithstanding their forlorn conditions, they are kindly thought of by those whom fortune has favored.

It is not pleasant to think that amid all the selfish haste of business, the heat of political discussion, the hurry and wear of City life, the public heart so quickly and warmly responds to an appeal in behalf of these little waifs whose condition during the excessive heat of this Summer has indeed been pitiable? New-York has done many acts of benevolence of which she may justly be proud, but no act of the past shines brighter than this kindness to the poor children.

From the Boston Commonwealth.

Here is a hint for the philanthropist. Good promotes good. There is nothing like kindness and practicability. In New-York, the TIMES "poor children's fund" was set on foot by some of the attaches of that paper early in the Summer. The contributions have reached a total of $19,164, of which 20,837 has been expended for the "poor children's excursions." There have been sixteen of these picnics, on which 14,987 children have enjoyed a holiday. As the children have been accompanied by 1,320 adults, (parents and teachers,) the whole number participating in these excursions has been 16,307, and the average cost of each individual only a trifle over half a dollar. But this is by no means all that has been accomplished. A relief work has been inaugurated in the City, and is progressing in a most satisfactory manner, by which poor children are furnished with food and stock enough with which to make confections being also furnished to the parents. No worthier charity has been established for many a day, and the paper which has managed it deserves the thanks of the public.

From the Poughkeepsie News.

The NEW-YORK TIMES has immortalized itself by inaugurating and carrying on, during the excitement of a political campaign, a most noble charity. The picnic up the Hudson on Wednesday was attended by over 1,500 children, many of whom had never before been out side of the filthy streets in which they were born—children who have been denied the precious boon of a mother's love, and whose little shrivelled, gaunt bodies tell the story of the poverty and wretchedness amid which their lives are spent. To take these poor creatures out for a day in the woods, where the breath of heaven, untainted by the vile odors that pervade their own abodes, could reach them, conferred a blessing that cannot be estimated, and the TIMES people will have the benedictions of all good and reverent people for their holy work. Did no other recompense come, the glad, swelling hearts of the little waifs who have seen the country and felt the inspiration of its beauty for the first time, would be ample for all the labor bestowed. Seventeen picnics have been given, and the last one came off on Saturday. The fund has reached $20,000, and certain it is that no money was ever spent that has yielded a richer return of joy and comfort than this. The TIMES has erected its own monument in the hearts of the children it has made happy.

The Tragedy in London—A Would-Be Suicide Held for Murder.

The inquest on the body of Herman Nagel, who, with Paul May, determined on Aug. 20 to commit suicide, and caused May to fire upon him while he discharged a pistol upon May, had terminated. The Coroner's review of the case ran thus: "These two young men," he said, "leaving their own country and coming to England, met with a young man—Auguste Dircks—who made acquaintance with them, lived with them, took them to all kinds of dissipation, and spent their money in all kinds of riotous conduct. They went to all sorts of public amusements, until they found themselves in Chelsea, and, almost entirely under this man's guidance, located in Langton-street. Then they found life oppressive to them there, and they attempted to go to America, and went to Liverpool, but returned to London. After seven days' stay in London they found themselves destitute of money, and, having in vain looked for employment, they had no resources left. One could hardly conceive a more depressing, trying condition than that in which they found themselves placed." The Coroner then referred in detail to the circumstances attending the crime of the 21st inst., and then remarked that in his deposition May said Nagel did not tell of his intention to take his life or his own. "From that they would have to infer that Nagel shot May without the consent of the latter. That was a very important point, because it was one on which hung the question whether May was responsible for Nagel's death or not, irrespective of his own condition. Upon the other side, they had evidence that May was seen by Helen Gordon to write a letter which he handed over to Nagel, who said, "Ja; Ja; very good." In that letter he bade farewell to the woman Burgess. It was evidently the kind of letter usually written when one was about to take farewell of the world. In was foretelling and premeditation of overt criminality, when May was found wounded, his neckcloth and waistcoat were taken off. Nagel's also were taken off—the difference being that Nagel had his shirt drawn back, so that the shot did not go through it, while it was not so in May's case. It was possible that the circumstance was rather a confirmation than a contradiction of May's deposition, because he might not have been prepared for the shot at the moment; but all the circumstances pointed to the probability—he might say to the almost certainty—that these two young men had determined to die together; Whether one was to shoot the other, or each to shoot himself, they had determined to cease to exist, had locked themselves in the room, and carried out their intentions. Whether it was carried out in the way May intended or not, was not material; because the point was, if two people agreed to commit suicide, and one died and the other survived, the one who survived was guilty of murder. They were both participes criminis—both were guilty of murder. That was the position; and though there were many matters which might be gone into to show their motives and their previous history, still the main point was that they agreed to die together; that one died, and that the other, who was living, was responsible and guilty of the murder of the man who was dead." After twenty minutes' deliberation the jury returned the following verdict: "That on the 21st day of August the said Hermann Nagel did die of the mortal effects of a pistol-shot; that the said death was caused by his own act; that he did feloniously kill and murder himself, and that Paul May did feloniously, willfully, and of malice aforethought, aid and abet the said Hermann Nagel in killing himself, against the peace and dignity of our Lady the Queen, and that the said Hermann Nagel was about the age of twenty years." The verdict was one substantially of wilful murder against Paul May; and, all the witnesses having been bound over to prosecute him at the Central Criminal Court, the inquiry closed.

Another Influential Democrat for Grant.

Gen. William H. Morris, of Putnam County, New-York, explained his political position in a speech at Garrisons on the 6th inst. in the following words:

"I am with you in this contest, my Republican friends, because there is, in my judgment, no other course left for a War Democrat than that of following Grant. We find ourselves without a regular Presidential nominee of our own creed, and are forced to choose between two Republican Party disciplinc orders, us to sustain Greeley, but when it calls upon us to follow a man who has been, in the words of O'Conor, the party's bitterest enemy; a man untried in any important official trust; a radical of the most visionary characters; a traitor to rebel against the dictates of unfaithful party managers. The Administration of Gen. Grant has been safe and satisfactory. Under it the country has prospered; its laws have been enforced, its credit sustained, and the ballot everywhere protected. It would be vile servitude to party to vote for the exchange of such an Administration for one which would, in all human probability, prove wildly experimental and vainly vacillating."

GEN. DIX'S ORDER.

"If Any Man Attempts to Haul Down the American Flag, Shoot Him on the Spot."

The Exact Truth of the Matter—Authenticity of Gen. Dix's Letter—A Few Facts in the Case.

GEN. DIX'S ORDER TO "SHOOT HIM ON THE SPOT."

We find the following in a Tammany-Greeley paper of the 9th inst.:

"The Washington Star renews the discussion about Gen. Dix's dispatch to 'shoot him on the spot.' Speaking on some authority which is not given, the Star avers that 'Mr. Stanton had nothing whatever to do with the writing or sending of the dispatch.' The answer to this assertion is that Mr. Stanton did not write the dispatch, nor did he direct the sending of it. The writing was done by the hand of Gen. Dix, and it was sent by his order; but the phrase, 'If any one attempts to haul down the American flag, shoot him on the spot,' was not Dix's, but Stanton's, who suggested it to Dix. This we say on the authority of Mr. Stanton himself, who told us so."

We place the foregoing at the head of this article, for the purpose of connecting with it the testimony which proves it to be wholly unfounded, and of proving the editor of the Sun to be a man whose word is not to be taken on any subject whatever.

The World as well as the Sun had given wide currency to the false statement that Gen. Dix's order, which is well known to have aroused the feeling of the country at the commencement of the rebellion, was written by Mr. Stanton. The former, finding the falsehood about to be exposed, says: "It is hardly worth making such a fuss about." It is of little moment to the country by whom a bold and spirited paper was written. But it is very important to Gen. Dix that he should not rest under the calumnious imputation of having silently permitted the American people for ten years to ascribe to him a merit which belonged to another.

The following correspondence between Hon. J. S. Black and Gen. Dix, members of Mr. Buchanan's Cabinet at the time the order was given, the extract from the Ledger announcing a disclaimer by Mr. Stanton of the authorship of the order, and the distinct evidence of Mr. Stanton himself, silence this calumny forever:

JUDGE BLACK TO GEN. DIX.

YORK, Penn., Aug. 26, 1872.

MY DEAR SIR: I have just seen a newspaper statement that you are discovered not to be the author of the order to shoot any man who attempted to haul down the American flag. I have a very distinct recollection that you read the order as your own in the presence of the President and members of the Cabinet at or immediately after the time of its date. I have not now and never had any more doubt about its being yours and yours only than I have about the authenticity of any act done by any member of that Administration. All the circumstances concur to convince me that I cannot have been mistaken. Stanton certainly did not write it or suggest it, and I am satisfied that nobody except yourself knew of its existence until you read it on the occasion I speak of.

It is certainly no disgrace not to have been the author of any specified production, but it must be rather unpleasant for a gentleman to be convicted of having claimed, or permitted his friends to claim for him, an honor to which he is not entitled. I am perfectly sure that the charge of this latter fact upon you is unfounded and false. I am, most truly, yours, &c.,

J. S. BLACK.

Gen. J. A. DIX, New-York City.

GEN. DIX TO JUDGE BLACK.

NEW-YORK, 28th August, 1872.

MY DEAR SIR: I have this moment received your favor of the 26th inst.

You are perfectly right in saying that Mr. Stanton neither wrote nor suggested the order to shoot on the spot any man who should attempt to haul down the American flag. It was written by myself at the Treasury Department in the evening, without consultation with any one, when I was there at work alone; and it was sent to its destination the same evening precisely as it was written. If Mr. Stanton had suggested it, no one would have had more pleasure than myself in making the fact known.

You are right also in your remembrance that I read it to the President and the members of his Cabinet, but not on the evening it was sent. It was at the first Cabinet meeting afterward.

Some eight or nine years ago a scamper appeared in the Ledger in this City ascribing the authorship of the order to Mr. Stanton. His attention was called to it, and he immediately wrote to Mr. Bonner, the editor, disclaiming it, and saying that whatever responsibility or merit there was in it was wholly mine. The correction was shortly after made, and will be found in the columns of that journal.

I thank you for bringing the matter to my notice, and am gratified that you do me the justice to believe I would not appropriate anything not strictly my own.

I am, my dear Sir, very truly yours,

JOHN A. DIX.

Hon. J. S. BLACK.

We have found in the New-York Ledger, of the 24th May, 1862, the following article, referred to in Gen. Dix's letter:

DIX AND STANTON—AN INTERES

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

MARRIAGE AND DIVORCE IN ENGLAND.

AN EXPOSITION OF THE LAWS OF MARRIAGE AND DIVORCE, as administered in the Court for Divorce and Matrimonial Causes, with the method of procedure of each kind of suit; illustrated by copious notes of cases. By HENRY BROWNING, of the Inner Temple, Barrister at Law. 8vo, pp. 267. London: WILLIAM RIDGWAY and SIMPKIN & HAMILTON.

Although intended chiefly as a professional guide to practice in the Court for Divorce and Matrimonial Causes, this book is of very general interest. To one-half the world—the fairer and the weaker—the question how marriage may be dissolved is second in importance only to that of how it may be most happily contracted; and even to the other half, less dependent upon marriage for the enjoyment of a complete and well-rounded life, the relation is fraught with good or evil in a degree which pertains to no other entered into voluntarily, because all others of that kind are dissolvable at will. In no two countries are marriage laws and customs so nearly alike as in England and in the United States. In fact, marriage in these is to all intents and purposes identical in the privileges which it bestows and the duties which it imposes. It could not well be otherwise, derived as all our social and most of our civil institutions necessarily are from those of the mother country. Some differences do exist; but so there are differences between the laws affecting marriage in some of the States of the Union. But these do not touch essential points, and the variation upon such points between the English laws and the general body of our own laws on this subject is not greater than that between those of some of our own commonwealths. In our notice of Mr. Browning's very valuable and interesting work we shall pass over that which relates to mere points of practice, and consider only those passages which touch essential facts, provisions of law, customs and principles.

Marriage may be contracted by parties not under some special legal disqualification, who are of the age of fourteen years in males and twelve in females. A marriage according to the forms of the Church of England (called here the Protestant Episcopal Church) can be solemnized only after the publication of banns upon three successive Sundays in the parish church in which the parties shall dwell, or by license. Of licenses there are two kinds; the common license, granted by the Ordinary of the place or his surrogate; and a special license, which is granted only by that great ecclesiastical functionary, the Archbishop of Canterbury, Primate of all England. This is the license of which we read in "fashionable novels;" and it was such a license that even in the Pickwick Papers, Mr. Jingle obtained when he wished to appropriate unto himself that ancient maiden, Mr. Wardle's sister, to the discomfiture of Mr. Tracy Tupman. Such a marriage must be solemnized between the hours of 8 and 12 in the forenoon, and must be attested by two witnesses besides the officiating clergyman. The time—before noon—which is often mentioned in English literature, for instance in the Vicar of Wakefield, in which the Vicar brings two brides disputing a question of precedence to their senses, by threatening to shut his Prayer-book, as it is plain that the dispute cannot be settled before 12 o'clock, so that there can be no marriage on that day—is prescribed by canon law. It is probably a remnant of Roman Catholicism, marriage in the Roman Church being a sacrament, and the ceremony being accompanied by a partaking of the eucharist by both parties to the contract; and in that communion it is thought decorous, if not essential, to receive the consecrated wafer fasting. Hence probably, also, the custom of "wedding breakfasts" after the marriage ceremony in England. Marriage may be otherwise contracted only by a civil ceremony, dissenting clergymen not being allowed to solemnize the rite. The contract is made in the presence of an officer called the Registrar, after twenty-eight days' notice, and the hours and the witnesses are the same as in the case of marriage in church. In the case of minors, parents or guardians may prevent a marriage by publicly forbidding the banns. "All marriages must be registered."

These are the essentials of legal marriage in England; but they are not essential to the acquirement of the privileges of marriage or to a subjection to its duties there. For what is marriage in one country is not marriage in another; and when a marriage has taken place abroad, whether between British subjects or foreigners, it is valid in England if it was solemnized according to the forms required by the then existing law of the country in which it took place. For not only in England, but in all civilized countries, marriage is regarded as valid or invalid according to its celebration in compliance, or at variance, with the law of the place in which it was contracted. Thus, for instance, a clandestine marriage between an Englishman and a Sicilian woman at Palermo, being valid by the Sicilian law, will hold valid in England; and it being proved that a man and woman had lived together in the State of Virginia as man and wife, and, as according to the laws of that State, such cohabitation constitutes in the eye of the law a valid marriage, the marriage in this case was regarded as valid in the English Courts. It is also important to remark that all marriages of British subjects in foreign countries are regarded as valid, except where the parties would not be competent by the laws of England to contract a valid marriage. But in such cases the British subject must be domiciled in the country where the marriage is contracted; that is, must be residing there, and not merely on a visit. But marriage, as conferring the legal status of husband and wife, being throughout Christendom the voluntary union of one woman to one man for life, to the exclusion of all others, polygamous marriages, although they may conform to the law and custom of some particular places, are not recognized as valid in England, and the English matrimonial Court will not recognize it as conferring rights in a suit instituted for the purpose of enforcing matrimonial obligations. This rule seems right enough when we consider it as applied to Mormon marriages; but in the possible case of one of the wives of a Mussulman in England, it might work wrong, and at least inflict a great hardship, to deny her the position and rights of a relation which she had innocently and honestly assumed, or been made to assume, in conformity to laws and customs centuries old, and which were to her and her husband the only laws in existence.

Although as to marriage, its rights and duties, the laws and customs of England and this country are thus essentially the same, as to divorce or separation, there are very important differences. There, as here, adultery on the part of the wife, unless it has been committed with the connivance, or through the fault of the husband, is ground of absolute divorce; but simple personal unfaithfulness on the part of the husband is not ground of divorce on the petition of the wife. It must have been incestuous, or accompanied with bigamy, or rape, or unnatural crime, or cruelty, or unreasonable desertion for at least two years. What merely wounds the feelings is in few cases admitted as cruelty; for law cannot deal with sentimental grievances, and even in regard to more tangible actions, much consideration is given to the station in life, the ages, habits and education of the parties. For what might be tolerable to some women would be intolerable to others of different habits and breeding. As a general rule, legal cruelty must involve danger to life, limb, or health; it must render cohabitation unsafe, or be likely to be attended with injury to the health of the complaining party. Unfaithfulness with a woman living at the home of the parties was, we believe, once regarded as cruelty justifying divorce on the wife's application; but it seems now to be decided that indifference, neglect, aversion to the wife's society, cessation of matrimonial intercourse on the part of the husband, even although he is unfaithful with a woman under the same roof where he is residing with his wife, do not constitute legal cruelty, unless accompanied with such acts of violence toward his wife as cause her mental and bodily suffering. Habitual intoxication is not regarded as legal cruelty; nor is the denial of necessaries and comforts, unless the husband's means are ample for their procurement; and what are necessaries and comforts is determined in a great measure by the rank and condition in life of the parties.

These limitations apply to absolute divorce. A sentence of judicial separation may be obtained by either the husband or the wife on the ground of adultery, cruelty or desertion without sufficient cause for two years or upward.

Cruelty may exist on the part of the wife as well as on that of the husband, and suits by the husband on this ground, although happily rare, have been brought and with success. Menaces, if accompanied with probability of bodily violence, are, according to the decision of Lord Stowell, sufficient; who adds with regard to jealousy: "Jealousy is a passion producing as violent effects as any other passion, and there will be the same necessity to provide for the safety and comfort of the individual." The author adds, in a note, that wives would do well to remember that "beating an erring husband, or locking him up in his own house, or locking him out of it, are not the likeliest means to reclaim his wandering affections; but that such conduct will most probably lead to the very opposite result, and drive the object of such treatment to the comforts of some more indulgent society." This seems to be pretty good evidence that English wives, notwithstanding their alleged subjection, are apt to carry matters with a higher hand than their American sisters do, and reminds us of the testimony of the sailor who said that he was "enticed" to do a certain act by being "punched with a handspike." The author might well have further said that moral suasion of the kind typified by beating and locking out is not likely to be more effectual than blows and barred doors.

Marriages will be decreed null and void in England on the grounds of physical incompetency, of the lack of due publication of banns, or lack of license, or because of the publication of banns or the obtaining of license under a false name, or of due notice before the Registrar, or of insanity at the time of the ceremony, or of unlawful consanguinity, or of prior marriage, and for no other reason.

Suits for the restitution of conjugal rights are always regarded with favor by the English Courts, in which the freedom with which wives in this country withdraw themselves from the houses and the society of their husbands would meet with prompt and effectual check. But the Courts can, of course, only compel conjugal cohabitation, and, on the part of the husband, proper support. The complainant, whether husband or wife, must be free from any matrimonial offense; and, as a general rule, nothing can be pleaded in bar to a suit for restitution, except such facts as would constitute a matrimonial offense, such as adultery, legal cruelty, or desertion for two years without any appeal; or, in case of dismissal of the appeal, it is lawful for both parties to marry again, as if the previous marriage had been dissolved by death. Therefore, when a suit for divorce is undefended and divorce is decreed, either party may marry again the very day after the decree is made absolute. Such marriages are frequent in cases where the divorce is at the suit of the husband, the erring wife being married by the man by whom she was led astray. The English law thus favors the only recompense that can be made to her by a man who has done her woman's greatest wrong, and for whom she has made woman's greatest sacrifice. This, indeed, seems a beneficent tendency of law, and, indeed, our own legal policy. When divorce is decreed and alimony is awarded to the wife, in the case of moderate incomes—say not exceeding £3,000 a year—the alimony is about one-fourth of the husband's income, when the wife has no income of her own. When she is otherwise provided for, or the husband's income is a large one, and accompanied, as is usual in such cases, with corresponding responsibilities, it is in less proportion. When divorce is decreed at the suit of the wife the husband is deprived of any interest he may have in the income of the wife under marriage settlements.

One common accompaniment of a decree of divorce in this country is unknown in England—the punitory prohibition of marriage to an unfaithful party. There, after the time limited by law for appealing against any decree dissolving a marriage—three months—has expired, in this regard is rendered almost null by the sense of honor and affection among men, and the practical confusion introduced into our marriage laws by the limitation of the force of judicial decrees by State boundaries. On the whole we cannot but be impressed by a sense of the wisdom and the benevolence of the English laws in regard to divorce as they are presented in this careful and intelligent digest. American women may object to a certain partiality which they show, except in the last point, to the foibles and errors of the stronger sex; but their tendency is undoubtedly to a conservation of family feeling and of marital authority, the warning influence of which is deplored by our wisest and purest writers on social morals.

FIFINE AT THE FAIR, AND OTHER POEMS.

By ROBERT BROWNING. 12mo, pp. 280. Boston: JAMES R. OSGOOD & CO.

The late Mr. N. P. Willis—and, by the way, how few years will pass before it will be necessary to explain to the general reader who Mr. N. P. Willis was—once giving some friendly advice to a young author, said to him, "If the critics pitch into you for a characteristic fault, cultivate that fault." The young author was not Robert Browning; but if it had been he, and he had followed the advice, he would probably have ended by producing "Fifine at the Fair" and "Prince Hohenstiel-Schwangau, Savior of Society," which make up the bulk of this volume. Browning is the most dramatic poet that has appeared in English literature—in any literature—since Shakespeare. He has a power of merging his own individuality in that of the personages whom he creates, or for whom he speaks, in feeling with them as they would feel, thinking for them as they would think, in brief, of being them, in which he is without a rival among all the imaginative writers of this century, except Sir Walter Scott; and although not so vital, so fleshly, as the great novelist, he is far more subtle, more profound, more philosophic. He fills a niche which he has made for himself, and from which he will never be displaced. He has a stronger hold of his admirers than any other living poet; but the circle of his worshipers is comparatively small. To the general reader of poetry his poems, except his "Dramatic Lyrics," a few ballads, and still fewer of the simpler pieces in "Men and Women," are almost as unintelligible as if they were written in an unknown tongue. This is not because of his choice of language; for his vocabulary is simple as well as strong and nervous. Nor is it because he uses words in a sense peculiar to himself. No peculiar use of words is an essential condition of obscurity. Let any reader not trained in mathematics or in metaphysics open a book written in the higher vein of those sciences, and on the first page that meets his eye he will be likely to find a sentence of every word of which he knows the meaning, and the construction of which is perfectly clear, and which yet he will be entirely at a loss to understand. The reason of which inability is, that he is not what the French call en rapport with the writer, or, in a colloquial and strong English idiom, is "not up to him." And Browning starts, or soon rises, out of the plane of the ordinary reader's apprehension. He takes for granted that which this ordinary reader must have told to him, to which he must be led step by step, and to which most writers do not disdain to lead him. All this Browning too often scorns; and he umps, without preliminary setting forth of conditions precedent, not only into the middle of his story, but upon an intellectual plane and into a condition of mental activity which requires a quickness of grasp on the reader's part which, in most men, is developed only by a continued concentration of thought produced by a gradually-aroused interest and a consequent intellectual excitement. And Mr. Browning's intellectual method is reflected in his style, which is abrupt, elliptical and harsh. He suggests rather than recounts; hints rather than describes. He shows the reader the essential part of an idea, and expects his imagination to supply the rest. Hence, even to his familiars and admirers, reading Browning's poems is often a labor, although a delightful one, rather than a recreation.

Of all these traits of mind and style, "Fifine at the Fair" is a characteristic example, while on the other hand it is not an example of his characteristic merits—his dramatic power, his strong and vivid imagination, his subtle and poignant expression of passion. As to story, there is little or none; of character, which may be portrayed without story, less, and of emotional expression, even less yet. Fifine, who gives the poem its name, is a wandering acrobat, a performer on that flying juggernaut, the trapeze, and her coarse, short-skirted, sawdust and gas-smelling habits and feelings are the mere starting point from which the poet wanders off into philosophical dissertations, in limping verse, upon art and love, as they appear to the sublimed apprehension of a mind exalted into the higher regions of what we must call poetical psychology. Indeed the greater part of the poem is an example in verse of the famous Scotch definition of metaphysics: "When the party that hearin disna ken what the party that's speakin means; and the party that's speakin disna ken what he means himsel, that's metapheesics." Now, without implying anything disrespectful of the party that's speaking, we confess that as to the most of the poem we are in the condition of the party that's hearing. True, we do get occasional glimpses of a meaning, but it is only to regret that the poet could not have expressed it with a clearness and coherence which other poets of equally high purpose have not found incompatible with the expression of thoughts at least equally subtle and profound.

Among the most intelligible passages of the poem, and one of the few which move the sympathy of the reader, is the following plea for a charitable judgment of creatures like Fifine:

"Ah! do you mark the brown in the cloud, made bright with fire
Through and through? as, old wives succeeding to desire
Quality you and I once more compassionate
A hapless infant, doomed (lie on such partial fate!)
To sink the inborn shame, support the nods and becks
Of clowns that have their stare, nor always pay its price;
An infant born, perchance, as sensitive and nice
As any soul of you proud dames, whom destiny
Keeps uncontaminate from stigma of the sty
She wallows in! You draw back skirts from filth like her.
Who possibly braves scorn, if, scorned, she minister
To age, want and disease of parents, one or both;
Nay, peradventure, stoops to degradation, loath
That some just budding sister, the dew yet on the rose,
Should have to share in turn the ignoble trade; who knows?"

A just and humane view, and one worthy of the poet; yet not so new that it compels admiration, thrust thus roughly and crudely into disjointed verse, bare of the ornament of fancy, and even without a touch of pathos. The expression is rude (hardly strong) and coarse, and few of the lines have any more of the charm of melodious verse in them than Walt Whitman's catalogues of heterogeneous facts and things. By thinking, we can discover the connection which some of the thoughts have with others; but even then we have little more than our labor for our pains. And much in this style are the more reflective, and therefore more involved and difficult passages of the poem.

As to style pure and simple, that is, the manner of his English, Mr. Browning, in this last composition, is often barbarous. Lines like the following are not uncommon:

"Next, who is this performs the feat of the trapeze?
Lo, she is launched: look, lo, the fairy! how she flees
O'er all those heads thrust back!"

"—I want put down in black and white
What compensating joy unknown and infinite,"&c.

"What sound out-warbles brook, while, at the source, it wins
That moss and stone dispart, allow its bubblings breathe."

Mr. Browning sets prepositions and conjunctions at naught, and expects the reader to supply for himself what, in this regard, is essential to English, and has been essential since it was a language. And in the last line quoted above the sense is so squeezed, and racked and dislocated as to be hardly recognizable. And after all, when it is discovered, is it worth the rough labor of the search among that stony heap of words shot down before us by the tip of Mr. Browning's cart? It is not pleasant for an admirer to speak thus of any performance of a poet of Mr. Browning's well-won eminence; but he seems at last to have forgotten that one important end in the use of language is to be understood, and that to understanding a certain coherence, at least, of coherence of thought and continuity of utterance is necessary.

The volume closes with a little ballad—by the grace of the publishers, for it is not in this Lenitive copy—called "Hervé Riel," which, as a work of poetic art, is worth all that goes before it, ten times over. In it Browning's picturesque, dramatic style, and tells the story of a simple Breton pilot who saved the French fleet and loved his wife, and was a man, every inch of him. To read it at the end is like coming out of darkness into light.

SARATOGA.

Homeward Bound—Close of a Not Remarkably Successful Season.

From Our Own Correspondent.

SARATOGA, WEDNESDAY, Sept. 11, 1872.

The last days of Saratoga certainly end boast none of the poetry of the Last Days of Pompeii. They are entirely surpassed by the last fac-de-fois of a display of fire-works on the "plantation dance," which generally winds up the negro-minstrel exhibition of the period. Every one suddenly finds that they have had enough of it, and in a moment the life of the place is gone beyond retrieval. Every one is homeward bound, and thinking how they shall get all their things into their trunks, not what they should take out. Those who do not go today will go to-morrow, and in a few days Saratoga will be as quiet as for the last ten weeks she has been noisy and bustling. Even the hotel-keepers shut up shop and hurry away, and either go into a state of business hybernation, or, by a sudden transformation, burst out in some other sphere of life. This last scene in the year's eventful history of the great fashionable watering-place is a sad one; and yet it is one of commonplace every-day life—so simple in its plot and arrangements that it plays itself, without the aid of stage managers and prompters.

One of the leading characters is the hotel proprietor. During the last few days this gentleman is in high feather, if he has had what he calls a "noble" season. He is a little anxious and very active in the matter of his collections, if the season has been a bad one. In either case, he redoubles his attentions to his guests, and then scrupulously estimates the value of such increase of labor before he enters the item under some fictitious name on the various bills. He avows emphatically, but untruly, that he has scarcely been in bed for all the week, that he has had to run to every part of the house at least twenty times a day to see that things are properly done—and all because the lazy niggers know their time is up at the end of the week, and they have consequently no fear of dismissal before their eyes. All this is very diplomatic, for he has just stepped up to parlor No. 10 to receive payment of his little account. It is hard on him, he continues, but he cannot see his guests neglected—especially such guests as——, the gentleman who is impatiently beating the devil's tattoo with one hand on the table, and humming and hahing over the lengthy bill which he holds in the other, and for which he knows he must draw a check, little as he likes doing so. But having just retreated with a heavy loss from ventured a serious encounter with Madame over that same bill, and having found that "Taming the Shrew" was a role in which he did not shine as an actor, he is too weary to renew the fight with the landlord. He draws his check, Boniface pockets his half and half of earnings and stealings, bows his thanks, and fancies he feels a magnetism in that triple-folded piece of paper which lies in his trowsers' pocket, as he chuckles his way down-stairs. Yes, my lord of Wall-street or Broadway goes back to his counting-house and his ledgers a disappointed and a poorer man. One hundred dollars a day is a considerable sum of money to the man who has to earn it; but it is as nothing in the greedy sight of the Saratoga hotel-keeper. But my lord of Wall-street or Broadway will forget the lesson he has, after all, but imperfectly learned before next Summer arrives, and July will find him at some other ruination emporium by the water or the water's side, perhaps even once more at Saratoga itself.

The mothers and daughters—you may take your affidavit on those who remain for the last week—are also disappointed. In their eyes the season, not they, has been a failure. They are all cross with one another and vexed with themselves, and substitute mutual recrimination for the mutual admiration with which, as family allies, they began the family campaign. The hope of the family is in no more amiable frame of mind. He has wasted the substance of a whole year's allowance on the races and in riotous living and drunkenness, and he sees the smart figure of his tailor ascending the steps of the Fifth-avenue family mansion, to apply for payment of his long-outstanding bill. Having failed in his promise to his mother to return home with a full-blown heiress in tow, he must fulfill his alternate promise to his father of occupying a clerk's chair in his counting-house. The bare thought of such a thing is horrible. He would be socially lost. He might as well black boots or sell newspapers in the streets at once; he would at least, in that case, have the advantage of being in the fresh air all day. And what is $1,000 a year salary to him? It wouldn't pay his boot-maker's bill! And after all these comes Maria, the belle, who is disappointed in the number and amount of the gratuities she has received for delivering bouquets, messages and billet-doux to her young mistresses, "anywhere but in the parlor." She is overwhelmed with the gloomy prospects of the real Valenciennes lace edgings to her next season's cape, which she had so set her heart on. And lastly, the colored coachman. He, too, is sore at heart. His personal expenses have exceeded his monthly wages, and he has discovered—alas! too late—that whisky-poker and seven-up are just as well understood, and are just as dangerous, in the low liquor-saloons of Saratoga as they are in those of New-York. The maid takes her revenge by stealing her mistress' lace, the man in starving his master's horses and selling the corn. From the head to the lowest of the family, they are all "down" on Saratoga; but, after having had a few hours of rival glazing and staring in the drawing-room car, they reappear in New-York, as the play-bills say, in their old characters, but with new scenery, dresses and appointments, and are soon themselves again.

With regard to the leading hotels I should judge that the proprietors have not had an over-successful season. At the Grand Union and Congress Hall there have been any number of visitors coming and going daily. But it takes a vast concourse of guests to fill such enormous hotels and to keep their extensive ménage in full swing. Transient visitors seldom hire parlors, and are generally less profitable than periodical boarders. And they entail the necessity of keeping more servants, especially luggage porters. Of course, these hotels have a long roll of boarders, but they have a still longer roll of transient visitors. Now, at the Clarendon, with its meadows and woods in front and its greater quiet and retirement, this is not the case. The same families go there year after year, not, perhaps, so many New-Yorkers as the aristocratic families from all parts of the interior of the State. They engage their suites of rooms for the season long before the season begins, and the remainder of the rooms are quickly taken up by strangers who dislike the noise and bustle of the Congress and Union. And yet young and old, bachelor and maiden find as much real enjoyment at the Clarendon, and that, too, perhaps, of a more rational and refined character. If they want a few hours of excitement three minutes' walk will carry them into the great Saratoga whirlpool.

I think if the hotel-keepers here want to insure a good season in 1873 they should uniformly reduce their charges for board from five dollars to four dollars per day, and also that they should take care to publish their intention. The lower charge will attract much more custom than the higher one now repels.

EMPIRE OF GERMANY.

Prince Milan's Declaration of Majority—The Church Congress at Cartlewitz—The Slavonian Policy—Germany and Belfort—The German Artillery—Political Aspect of the Measure.

From Our Own Correspondent.

BERLIN, Saturday, Aug. 24, 1872.

Our attention has been forcibly directed to this week by the declaration of majority of Prince Milan, of Servia, celebrated on Thursday, 22d inst. The fête has long been looked forward to in America as a black cloud of evil, threatening to open the flood-gates to a large Slavonian agitation, and immerse the Empire in a sea of disquiet and apprehension. A reaction followed which Prince Milan, who had just attained his eighteenth year, made overtures of peace and amity to the Austrian Court, and seemed to renounce forever Russian influence, which has been predominant during his minority. Both extreme versions have been falsified by fact. Milan Obrenovic has proclaimed his adhesion to his uncle's, Prince Michael's, policy, and has confirmed his own guardians in the office of Ministers, entre autres Ristic, the noted Russian emissaire, as Foreign Minister. The latter can scarcely be meant as a demonstration against Austria, though it gives umbrage at Vienna. The fact is Milan could not with safety have dismissed his Ministers. His dynasty is too insecure to defy opposition, while men remain who remember his family in their humble calling of peasants. Ristic would have been a powerful adversary. Whatever he does, there are guarantees that Milan will not throw over Austrian influence, because he cannot go to that extremity either, without tempting the successors of the deposed Karageorgevic to retaliate. He must hold the balance between the two parties till he has power enough by experience and long tenure of office to strike out a new path on his own authority. Servia, it will be remembered, is the most influential of the Danubian principalities, not by its size or actual power, but because it is the head-quarters of South Sclavonianism, and thus the most amenable to Russian inspiration. The Obrenovic have been prudent enough not to hazard their semi-independent Crown by mixing in any of the late internal Turkish disturbances, but have used their opportunities to obtain more privileges from that Suzerain Power, which have by this time made the principality pretty independent. The Turkish Servians are, on the whole, quiet, inoffensive people, bent on internal progress in education, commerce and agriculture, and they are pretty flourishing. But the Austrian Servians, living this side the Danube, are the most troublesome agitators that ever lived, and the two are connected by the "great Servian idea"—no Eastern race without some idol idea—to unite and eventually liberate the Servian race. Thus Servia has been made a safe refuge to Austrian and Hungarian agitators, who could not be prosecuted beyond its borders, and under Russian influence has become the central point from which the various Slavonian wires, extending into Croatia, Bohemia, Moravia, &c., were pulled. Though Austrian hopes have not been altogether realized, still Russian influence is decidedly on the wane in Belgrade, and while this temper lasts, Austria stands comparatively high. The congratulation and reception of the Austrian representative at the Milan fête, Field Marshal von Mollinary, was consequently exceedingly cordial, only it was an unsatisfactory reflection that the General came straight from Carlowitz, the Austro-Servian capital, where he had acted in unquestionable hostility to the CisDanubian Servianism. There was a Church Congress at Carlowitz, convoked to elect a metropolitan Bishop, which was to be opened by the Imperial Commissary, according to constitutional usage. Fired by revolutionary ideas, emanating from the arch-agitator Miletic, the Bishops refused to recognize the Commissary's supremacy, and he, in turn, dissolved the Congress before it had been opened. Miletic has acquired permanent power in Austro-Servia by combining the trusteeship of two large funds, one ecclesiastical and the other educational, in his person. His patronage is consequently immense. Government is considering the withdrawal of the ecclesiastical fund as the only means of overcoming his power.

THE SLAVONIAN POLICY.

Russia was, of course, represented at the Belgrade celebration by a special envoy, who will presently join his master in this city. The Austrian Slavonians had resolved to make the fête a great Slavonian demonstration, and the Vienna Government has only partially prevented the execution of that project by a timely restriction of passport regulations. Numerous Austrian Slavonians flocked to Belgrade notwithstanding, but occasioned no disturbance. Otherwise the fête was a great success. The various Consuls congratulated the Prince, and the Italian presented an honorable decoration. Roumania dispatched a special envoy. The review went off in excellent order. The Prince's proclamation was received with a royal salute. There were concerts, plays, fêtes, and a brilliant illumination, which must have had a marvelous effect in the picturesque city, which separates the east from the west as the confluence of Danube and Save, while still it retains its original historic features, which modern innovations are fast obliterating to make Belgrade a small Paris or Pesth. The only Power not represented at Belgrade was Turkey, the Suzerain Government. There was no precedent for such a ceremony in Turkish history. The Porte had, four years ago, recognized Milan as lawful ruler; it has directed all its rescripts to him, ignoring the regency, after its usage, so there was no occasion or excuse for taking part in a second recognition.

GERMANY AND FRANCE.

Much has been said and written of late about a scheme imputed to the Germans of retaining Belfort as a German fortress, in disregard of the Treaty of Frankfort. Suspicion is ever strong in the French, and not least so while smarting under German occupation, and the apprehension may have been strengthened by the expedition undertaken on the line between Belfort and Colmar by Count Moltke at the head of his military staff. Staff expeditions are as regular annual enterprises in Germany as the field manœuvres. The Germans are indignant at the insinuation, but I remember perfectly well how their journals, some time ago, discussed the project as one of hardly doubtful realization. Germans do not like giving up what they once have laid hold on, and never relished the idea of parting with Belfort, the mountain stronghold, badly off as it is for water. It was formerly said that a remission of the indemnity would be offered to France in lieu of Belfort. Recently the Prussians have put the place in repair, and the French maintain that they have added new fortifications; the German semi-officials, however, dispute the fact. Our national organs avail themselves of the earliest opportunity to clear their countrymen of the reproach of want of patriotism advanced against them on account of the enormous subscriptions signed at Berlin and other German towns toward the French loan. That would have been, in German eyes, perfectly unpatriotic, not to say mean, leading as a sure result to repudiation of the whole debt on the part of France. Now it appears, or is contended, that only the smallest part of the subscriptions signed in Germany actually represented German money, and that most were made on behalf of foreign clients, chiefly French.

REORGANIZATION OF THE ARTILLERY.

Hardly less stir than is made by the French on behalf of Belfort, is raised by our own politicians on an internal subject of great military significance, namely, the long-projected reorganization of the artillery force, which will be presumably followed by reorganization of the engineers. Our military authorities seem perpetually at work, scheming many years in advance, so as to be prepared for any emergency. Whether they ever seriously direct their gaze eastward, I cannot tell, but a second French war is certainly a contingency so well considered that I dare say ambitious strategists have even definite and minute plans of operation in their desks. While we have not yet done with the old war, thought is already taken with regard to the most out-of-the-way commodities, in anticipation of a new one. Thus, an order has just been issued, requiring all railway companies to provide a sufficient stock of cars, not exceeding thirteen and a half feet in height, because great inconvenience was experienced in the late war from the height of German cars on French lines, where the tunnels are lower. To think of this while our railway companies are still hopelessly entangled in the task of providing themselves with rolling-stock for home use, is surely a somewhat extreme degree of forethought. The reorganization of the artillery is a far more momentous matter, and which has been long and maturely considered by the light of facts revealed both in the wars of 1866 and 1870. Every war appears to secure greater prominence to the artillery, and to make the issue of battles more dependent upon the large and early employment of cannon. The reorganization is to separate the foot artillery from the horse artillery, adding two batteries to each fifteen attached to every one of the sixteen army corps, and thus increasing each rather overgrown regiment to a brigade. Even as present the Prussian Army is far in advance of other nations in respect to the careful drill, training and superintendence it accords to artillery matters, scrupulous in assigning command only to officers of undoubted competency. The measure of reorganization will add to this prominence of the heavy arm, and, moreover, make the German artillery the most powerful in numbers of men and cannon that has ever been known.

THE POLITICAL ASPECT.

There is one question connected with the reorganization which is considerably more troublesome than the purely military side, viz., the political aspect. When Count Roon advanced his exorbitant estimates last year, claiming a lump sum for three consecutive years, the principal argument was thus such a vote would exempt the Assembly from the irksome task of inquiring annually during that period into army expenditure. Even this arrument the liberals considered faulty, but as it possessed undoubted practical advantages, it was suffered eventually to decide the question. Now it appears questionable if the lump sum will suffice for carrying out the projected measures, and even if it does, liberal statesmen are of opinion that it is an illicit use of the means voted. The matter might have been excused if the new scheme were only an afterthought or an unforeseen requirement; as it has, however, been confessedly contemplated many months before the last estimates were drawn up, it is construed as taking Parliament at an unfair advantage. The good of the "Fatherland" will probably carry M. von Roon over this constitutional danger. Even should Parliament prove obstinate, there are no less than two hundred millions of thalers of the French indemnity due next Summer (the residue of the first three and a half milliards, after deducting war debts and new outlays) awaiting distribution among the North German Confederation, the last one and a half milliards not having even been touched by legislation. Should, therefore, the cost of the reorganization not admit of skinning out by other economies, there would be a sufficient balance in hand to cover any military arrangements that M. von Roon might wish to make.

TENNESSEE.

A Union Man's Views on the Situation.

From an Occasional Correspondent.

KNOXVILLE, Monday, Sept. 9, 1872.

We Union men of the South are just now watching the political horizon of the North with considerable anxiety, in order to see whether the Northern people realize what we conceive to be the inevitable result that would follow the success of the Democratic Party in the pending Presidential campaign—results that to us are of fearful import. As you are doubtless aware, three years ago, through dissensions in the Republican Party, the Democracy coalesced with the Liberal wing of the Republican Party, as it was called, and through which they (the Democracy) foisted themselves into power in this State, the result of which has been an uninterrupted course of vindictive, tyrannical, proscriptive and revengeful legislation, added to which is the wholesale social proscription (as well as in business matters also) of all who cherish Union sentiments. What we now apprehend is, that, through the pretended surrender on the part of the Democratic Party of their anti-Republican principles and their union with what is called Liberal Republicanism, the people of the North may be deceived into trusting them with power—the trying and fearful result of which, in State Government, we have had the fruits of here, will be repeated in Federal legislation, and the virtual return to power of the old slave oligarchy, with the fearful passions and vindictiveness the war engendered and twelve years of exclusion from power has certainly produced, the fruits of which we here witness in every way and on every hand. Do the people of the North believe for one moment that those men would not use the power if they had it for the oppression of all those who were here in any way connected with their defeat in the war—in the absolute immunity from Federal interference which would then exist, and which now alone keeps them from worse measures than we now experience here in the South? Do you suppose that those men are sincere in the profession of adopting Republican principles and acquiescing in the reconstruction measures as now existing? If you do ask Union men in Tennessee how the professions of Democracy before the elections of '69 agree with their action since. And what would be the inevitable effect upon the business relations and general prosperity of the country at large of the changes in the Tariff, Tax and Reconstruction laws as they now are, which these men would certainly bring about. It may do to tell the people of the North that such will not be the case, but I defy you to find an intelligent Union man in Tennessee who would question it in the face of our own sore experience. And we cannot see otherwise than that they will certainly have the power in the event of Mr. Greeley's election. I might extend these points further, but suppose you will see the drift of our apprehensions from what I have said. And we are led to fear from the faith the North may have in the drift of these elements, and the confidence that may be reposed in the good intentions (professedly) of Democracy, partly from the tone of the Northern Press and the speeches of her public men, of which the following is a specimen:

Gen. Banks seems to entertain a poor opinion of those engaged in the late rebellion. In his late speech at Lynn, Mass., the telegraph reports him as saying:

"We have no cause to press those who engaged in rebellion further than our safety demands. They are but a faction, a minority without position, wealth, or influence, and it is not reasonable to suppose they will attempt to take power out of the hands of 40,000,000 of people, and reopen old issues."

Now, if a man of Gen. Banks' reputed intelligence will make a statement of that kind in a speech, and it goes uncontradicted, what must be the case with less well-posted, or the masses of the Northern people, with reference to their idea of the men who have controlled this section for fifty years, who control it now, as well as being the governing spirits of the Democracy, as they now are and always have been, and who, you will not deny, inaugurated and prosecuted the rebellion?

The Naked Hook.

The Auburn Advertiser says: "Soon after we heard of the nomination of Kernan for Governor by the fusionists of Syracuse, we asked one of the most intelligent Catholics in Auburn what he thought would be its effect upon the members of his communion in the State? He replied that he thought the time had gone by when any Catholic Irishman, who is not already a confirmed Democrat, will bite at any such naked hook. For himself, he said he considered it an insult to men of any intelligence or character of the Catholic faith to presume to catch their votes by any such flimsy and fulsome operation. It made too light of their religion, altogether, to treat it as a commodity to be caught like a fish by political fishing tackle, and weighed on common scales to balance Greeley's Orangeism.

How Philadelphia Impressed an Old Delawarian.

From the Smyrna (Del.) Intelligencer.

One day last week an elderly farmer, who has resided forty-five years in this county, and has been from home but once before in all those years, was on the steamer Pilot Boy. His astonishment at beholding the shores of New-Jersey, which he had supposed a wilderness, showing every evidence of being occupied by a numerous population, was most amusing. When the boat neared Philadelphia, and the old man saw the beautiful city, his delight was so great that he appeared scarcely able to restrain himself from dancing about the deck. He returned home convinced that the world is a success.

MISSOURI.

Republican Organization—The German Vote—Democrats Ignoring the Irish Vote—The Democratic Candidate for Governor.

From Our Own Correspondent.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Friday, Aug. 30, 1872.

The impression that Missouri is hopelessly Democratic is erroneous, and I suppose it derives its credence from the prominence given the Liberal movement by Gov. Brown and Senator Schurz (once acknowledged leaders) having stood godfathers at its christening and espoused its cause during its rearage. I do not claim for Missouri that she is strongly Republican, but I do claim that the prospects of her being so are eminently bright. It is exceedingly difficult to correctly estimate the relative strength of parties here from the fact that there are so many new elements of suffrage that enter into this canvass, but I will say that the Republican Party, as it was "of old," is more united and stronger than ever before.

REPUBLICAN ORGANIZATION.

Our efficient State Central Committee, under the guidance of Hons. Henry T. Blow and N. M. Harris, President and Secretary, are zealous, energetic and indefatigable in their labors. Through their efforts the State is thoroughly organized, with the exception of a very few remotely interior counties, and I am told that in ten days every county will be ready on its rolls ready for the contest. Dropping into our State Head-quarters the other day, I found a "busy scene." Vast numbers of letters are received daily from all parts of the State giving the most cheering assurances of probable victory. I have never before seen the people so ardently aroused to a full comprehension of the situation, so firm in determination to rescue our State from the Goths and vandals of Liberalism and Democracy as is evinced in this canvass.

THE GERMAN VOTE.

The Germans in this city, and especially the Germans in the State outside of the city, are responding nobly to the great cause of equality and freedom, and I firmly believe that before the election not one thousand Germans listhern Republicans can be found in the State supporting Greeley and Brown. Carl Schurz can control them no longer. His mercenary, grasping, hypocritical disposition is rapidly being developed, and it is a common occurrence to hear Germans on the street and in the beer gardens swearing "by the Fatherland" they don't belong to Carl Schurz, and can't be used by him for his own selfish political purposes.

DEMOCRATS IGNORING THE IRISH VOTE.

The late Democratic Convention have, in my judgment, committed some grave and probably fatal blunders. They have absolutely ignored the "Irish element" on their State ticket in their effort to court the German vote, and the Irish considering themselves the hitherto "bulwark" of the Democracy, decline to "bulwark" any more, and are repudiating the ticket with astonishing unanimity. Our Republican Convention next week, it is to be hoped, will give the Irish-American element a representation on their State ticket, which will give us a great number of votes from that class.

THE DEMOCRATIC CANDIDATE FOR GOVERNOR.

The Democratic candidate for Governor is already being charged with corruption and rascality, and is in a fair way of being made a "stench in the nostrils of honest men." The rest of their ticket is not strong, and much dissatisfaction exists among Democrats

Prospects of the Republican Cause in Delaware.

The Tammany Love-Feast.

The Liberal rally presents among its officers a few respectable men, about all the Tammany Republicans, a crowd of the old Empire, and a quantity of disappointed office-seekers and removed officials. Thus we find William R. Stewart, of the old Supervisors' Ring; "Tee" Oliver, George B. Van Brunt, John M. Costa and William A. Smalley, the Tammany Police Court Clerks; Rufus F. Andrews, Daniel D. Conover, Henry Beeny, of the Health Board; James McLaren, the Tammany Inspector of Oils; Amos Stockey, James L. Couenhoven, Jotham Wilson and James P. Walker, of the Board of Charities and Correction; Dr. Waterman, the Police Surgeon; Benjamin A. Willis, of Ludlow-street Jail; James M. Boyd, George H. Mackay, John Duke, Mark Lanigan, James L. Hastie, Charles A. Lamont, Orlando L. Stewart, and the usual smaller fry.

Of the well-known Tammany Democrats we find Sheriff M. T. Brennan, County Clerk Charles E. Loew, Dock Commissioner Richard M. Henry, late of the Citizens' Association; John Mullaly, the Health Commissioner; John Morrissey, Thomas Cottman, under Health Board; George W. Plunkett, Burton N. Harrison, of Jeff. Davis' staff; George M. Mitchell, Tammany schoolteacher; Henry Woltman, the notorious Nicholas Muller, E. R. Meade, Greeley's partner in the attempt to black-mail the Tobacco Association, and others.

Then there is Thomas A. Ledwith, who sold out return for a Judgeship which he did not get; Benjamin Wood, who has just forfeited a thousand dollars rather than make good a bet on Greeley; Frank Leslie, of Daly's Dunga, &c.

Of disappointed office-seekers or removed office-holders we note George Wilkes, Henry R. Williams, William Atkinson, John Duke, Hugh Nesbitt, George W. Palmer, George H. Van Cleft and Thomas F. Rightmire.

Then there are various persons who will by and by be wanting a reform indorsement, such as S. B. Garvin, District-Attorney; Gunning S. Bedford, City Judge; James C. Spencer, who wants to be Judge of the Supreme or Superior Court.

The weight of some men's names is so great that they appear two or three times. Among these are Robert Murray, Ex-Marshal; Samuel J. Glassey, Benjamin F. Mudgett, Charles S. Grant, George Wilkes, W. H. Wickham, Edward L. Gaul, Richard Kelly, Alfred Wagstaff, and others.

There are several names the use of which will, we believe, turn out to have been unauthorized, such as A. T. Stewart, A. A. Sclover, and Henry Clausen, Jr.

The Two Allies.

Fernando Wood was one of the chief orators at the Greeleyite show on Thursday night. The New-York Commercial Advertiser makes the following remarks on this point:

"Fernando Wood had something to say about Greeley last night. When Fernando was a candidate for Mayor, some sixteen or eighteen years ago, and later, when a candidate for Congress, Greeley and the Tribune had something to say about him. We will be frank enough to say that Mr. Wood was much more complimentary to Mr. Greeley than Mr. Greeley was to Fernando. While Mr. Wood talked an hour about Democracy and the Administration, he only referred to his old friend of the Tribune once, and this was at the close of his well-considered and labored oration, when, quite exhausted, he wiped his perspiring forehead, and, with his hand in his breeches pocket, exclaimed, 'I shall sustain the Democratic banner, though upheld by Horace Greeley!' Now, this is entirely different from the way Greeley was reported by Mr. Wood. It is true Mr. Greeley 'went for' Fernando, but as to the manner in which Greeley 'went for him,' out of regard to Mr. Wood we prefer to refer the reader to the columns of the Tribune of 1854, '55, '56, '57, '58, '59 and '60. Calling a man 'a stupendous fraud,' that 'a man over whom we have no wish to apply to any man whom Francis Kernan takes by the hand, and with whom he moves shoulder to shoulder in behalf of reform, to turn out thieves and usurpers.' For further particulars read files of the Tribune."

Missouri's Losses Through its Present Administration.

The St. Louis Democrat says that if there is a worse fraud in the campaign than the pretense of Brown's fitness for the Vice-Presidency, it is Brown's assertion in his maudlin speeches that the State of Missouri is basking in peace and prosperity as the result of Brown's election as Governor in 1870. The Democrat goes on to explain: "Taxation has alarmingly increased under his administration, the public expenditures have gone on at a rate of unexampled extravagance, the simplest duties of the Executive—the protection of the lives and property of our citizens—have been wilfully and wantonly neglected, incompetent officials have been appointed to office, Executive interference has deprived the people of their right to select their Judges, while incompetent and partisan appointments have been made in violation of the well-settled principles of the Constitution, and in the face of all this our Governor has the unparalleled effrontery to parade himself in the presences of the people of other States and boast of the triumphs of his Administration in Missouri."

Miscellaneous Notes.

Messrs. Maynard, Cheatham and Johnson, the rival candidates for Congressman at large in Tennessee, are all to speak at a political meeting in Chattanooga today....The Greeleyites of the Fourth District of Tennessee have nominated John M. Bright for re-election to Congress, and Col. James H. Lewis for Elector. The Troy Whig gives a report that Hon. J. M. Warren, the present Democratic Congressman from the Sixteenth District of this State, positively declines to become a candidate for re-election against Mr. Smart, and that Mr. Thayer, of Hoosic, takes the same position....A Tennessee paper gives a list of forty Anti-Grant papers! Is that State that support Cheatham for Congressman at large, and of ten that support Ex-President Andrew Johnson for first position?....Benjamin J. Cole is the Republican candidate for Elector in the Second District of New-Hampshire....The Greeleyites of the Twenty-fifth District of this State have nominated William T. Graves, a bank President, for Congress....The Portland Argus says that the Republicans of Maine did "get all the doubtful votes, and thousands who had openly declared against them, precisely as Mr. Kimball said they would"....Hon. Edward W. Hollister has been nominated for re-election to the Assembly by the Republicans of the First District of Washington County.

Col. Williamson, of Louisiana, Declares for Grant.

A recent Grant meeting in San Francisco was addressed by Senator Stewart, of Nevada, and Col. George Williamson, of Louisiana. The latter is a native of South Carolina, and was an original Secessionist and a member of the Louisiana Secession Convention. In his speech he said: "When Horace Greeley was nominated by the Cincinnati Convention I felt that he was afterward indorsed and nominated by the Baltimore Convention, and when the office to which I was nominated in my State was offered for the purpose of inducing me to see that it was for the best interest of the country to elect Horace Greeley I could not accept the situation; I could not see it in that light. There are thousands of men in the South who think as I do on this subject; who, like myself, seeing that the alternative which is presented is whether we must vote for Horace Greeley or for Gen. Grant, will do the honest thing and vote for Grant. When the war was ended we had lost all but honor, but that was intact. When the people of the South, who have lost all in the struggle, are willing to vote for a man who has never fought them like a man, but who has used his talents and powers in villifying them and in misrepresenting them, in stirring up discord and strife, then they must have lost their honor, and that I hope will never be said of Southern men. I do not think that they can vote for this man, who has been sowing the seeds of sectional strife, the harvest of which we have sadly reaped. Ever since 1848 until he has become an aspirant for the Presidential chair, he has continually misrepresented our people and our character. If he had come upon the battle-field and fought us, as did Gen. Grant, we might have forgiven him for this; but the man who stood a long way behind the line of soldiers and muskets, trying to make the people believe that the people of the South were barbarians, that we were uncivilized, and that our women were not virtuous—him, we cannot forgive. This miserable low bargain made to sell out our party and our principles, is so obnoxious that it stinks in the nostrils of all Southern men who profess to be honest and honorable."

What of Delaware?

The Wilmington Commercial predicts confidently that Grant and Wilson will receive the three electoral votes of Delaware. Nor does it despair of the election of James R. Lofland, the Republican candidate for Congressman. It says: "Mr. Lofland has hundreds of earnest friends in each county who are determined to see every honorable effort made to win the present campaign. Nor are these friends confined to our own party organization. A large section of the Democratic Party is both of the lower counties and also in New-Castle, as proved at the Bethlehem rally, and will come over in great numbers to the support of the Republican candidate and help to elevate him to a seat in Congress. Our opponents in this contest are at a great disadvantage. Their rallying cry heretofore has been 'Nigger, nigger,' which availed to unite them and retain within the party lines hundreds who otherwise would have stood in opposition; in this campaign that cry will avail them nothing. On the question of supporting Horace Greeley, their life-long enemy, who has been by the Baltimore tricksters surrendered to the party as its Presidential candidate, our opponents are fearfully demoralized, in consequence of which hundreds of the rank and file will either vote the Republican ticket or stay away from the polls."

Another Slander Refuted.

From the Army and Navy Journal of Sept. 14.

The partisan war-cry of "anything to beat Grant" seems to justify, in the opinion of some of the editorial fraternity, any degree of indulgence in open slander and dishonest insinuendo at the expense of the President. An army officer, whose name has been associated with one of the false statements about Gen. Grant, sends us the following communication in reply to it:

To the Editor of the Army and Navy Journal:

SIR: The inclosed slip was handed me by an army officer who, like myself, believes politics to be a dead issue. Shortly after the capture of Fort Sumter, in April, 1861, when the voice of the whole country was for war, we had a conversation with a gentleman who was an officer in the Mexican War, and who, besides, in Ohio, has obtained eminence as a civilian, that we have often thought of since. Said he to us: "I saw, today, an old comrade of mine in Mexico, a West Pointer, but who resigned his position in the army a few years ago. I asked him why he was not in uniform, and expressed my surprise that he was not already a Colonel or General of volunteers. His reply was, 'I think you and I have had fighting enough. Don't wait for this war to be a place by which I can make some money.' He sought to get that place here. He made an effort to be selected by the Government as a buyer of horses, but failed. He next asked me for a loan of a few hundred dollars of a military friend of ours, then and now in the regular army, for the purpose of entering into a business where he would get army patronage. He was refused, he applied to me to undertake to Gen. Burns for a position in the Commissary Department, in this City, but failed also in getting it. There he got nothing, and then he wended his way back to Illinois, and became a sort of Secretary to Gov. Yates; and, everything else being unsuccessful, he chose at last to go into the army. But he did not know or care to go where there was fighting at all. It was money he was after, and money he has made as General and President of the United States. If he had obtained the position he asked for as a buyer of horses, the country would have lost a good man, if not an honest man in that place, and we should not now have had a bad President, who makes the filling of his purse his principal business.

This was sent to my friend, an historian, who asked if "any one could answer it." Since my name was the only one mentioned, it was supposed that I knew something of the story.

I saw the article several months ago when it first appeared in the Cincinnati Enquirer, but on advising with friends, thought it then not a proper thing to notice. Now, however, it has been reiterated with additions and made to play a part in the political contest, it might be accepted by some as truth, if not answered. I cannot permit my name to be connected with false charges to the injury of any one. U. S. Grant never applied to me for any position in Cincinnati or elsewhere; this I know, and I can with almost positive certainty say that the whole story is of the same cloth. Capt. J. H. Dickerson, Assistant Quartermaster, would have been glad to have suggested some one he knew to intrust with the purchase of the large numbers of horses and mules called for then. He consulted me on the subject, and finally I recommended Mr. Harbin, of Kentucky, whom he employed and kept in that position.

Gen. Grant's personality was confounded with that of another "West Pointer who served in Mexico," and "resigned the army a few years ago," who did say what is here attributed to Grant, but not with the same motive; he had reasons, to him insurmountable, when which he chose to cover by a jocular reply to those who were inquisitive.

In this, as in most stories passing into legend, a prominent name is selected "to point a moral or adorn a tale."

Very respectfully, WM. W. BURNS.

The Reform Association.

At a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Reform Association, held at No. 7 Astor House last evening, James W. Gerard, Jr., offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That a committee of five, Chairman to be added, be appointed to confer with all associations which have been formed in the interest of reform movement, for the purpose of uniting upon and nominating an honest and capable man for the Mayoralty, and also candidates for other local offices.

Upon its adoption, the Chairman appointed the following committee: James W. Gerard, Jr., Oswald Ottendorfer, William F. Havemeyer, J. M. Bundy, Meyer Stern, and John Foley.

The Committee will be in session this Saturday afternoon, at 3 o'clock, at No. 7 Astor House, and all day on Monday next, to advise and confer with any organization or committee who may favor the foregoing resolution.

Another Vote.

On the 3 P. M. New-Haven express, last Saturday, a vote was taken among the passengers, with the following result:

| | |
|---|---|
| Grant | 208 |
| Greeley | 110 |
| Not voting | 79 |

That is the way the tide is setting.

The Veterans' Convention.

The Veterans' National Committee yesterday issued the following notice:

HEAD-QUARTERS VETERANS' NATIONAL COMMITTEE, FIFTH-AVENUE HOTEL, Sept. 12, 1872.

In response to the many inquiries upon the subject, the Committee have the honor to announce that the meeting of soldiers and sailors at Pittsburg, Sept. 17th instant, will be a Mass Convention, and that credentials of membership will be furnished at Pittsburg to all men who served in the Union Army or Navy during the war, whether regularly-appointed delegates or not. A. H. BURNSIDE, Chairman.
L. E. DUBLEY, Secretary.

The "Liberal" Exchequer.

Some three weeks ago a "Colored Men's State and National Political Association" was formed in Twenty-sixth-street, in favor of Greeley and Brown. Subsequently a hall was engaged and $50, one month's rent, paid in advance. Other expenses, amounting to $140, were incurred, and six weeks ago a committee was appointed to wait upon Gen. Cochrane for pecuniary assistance to enable the committee to keep the Club in existence. Cochrane was full of promises, spoke soothingly to the deputation, and said that money would be supplied to them in the course of a few weeks. The few weeks came but no money, and Greeley's footpoints was again requested to "pay up." He pleaded poverty, said there was no money in the "Liberal" Exchequer, and that there was no likelihood of its condition being improved. The colored citizens became indignant, and are preparing to disband the organization. They are not likely to vote for the Philosopher.

Fourth Congressional District of New-Jersey.

Col. Chas. Scranton, Chairman, who was instructed to call a Convention of Delegates for the district composed of the counties of Hunterdon, Sussex, Somerset, and Warren, has issued a call for such meeting, at Washington, Warren County, on Friday, Sept. 27 inst., at 1 o'clock P. M., to nominate a candidate for Congress for that district.

Giving Up.

The Washington correspondent of the Evening Post says: "One of Senator Sumner's most intimate friends here, who has believed that Greeley would be elected in November, gives up the contest now, and says that the Maine election has virtually decided the matter, and that if Greeley gets as many electoral votes as Seymour did in 1868, he will be very fortunate."

A Greeleyite Candidate for Congress Repudiates the Corrupt Coalition.

Hon. William Moran, of Philadelphia, who was nominated by the Greeleyites for Congress in the Second District of Pennsylvania, has refused to accept the nomination, and declared his adhesion to Grant. In his letter Mr. Moran says: "It is true there is much to complain of in the conduct of Administration; but the moment that would have chaos of Mr. Greeley, if elected President of the United States, would prove tenfold more disastrous to the interests of the Republic than the Administration of Gen. Grant. Thanking you again, and the members of the Convention, for the high estimate you have held of me in making me your candidate, I am free to say that I am for Grant and Wilson. Hastranit, O'Neill, Alexander, and the whole Republican ticket, and shall do my utmost to secure their election, and its success, in the present campaign."

The Straight-Out Democrats—Action of the Pennsylvania State Committee.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., Sept. 13.—At a meeting of the State Executive Committee of the Straight-Out Democrats, today, it was resolved not to call a State Convention till after the October elections. ## A Review of the Field After the Victory.

The "Percentage" Humbug Exposed Of—Result in the Congressional Districts—The Liquor Question—Some of the Aids to the Triumph.

From Our Special Correspondent.

AUGUSTA, Thursday, Sept. 12, 1872.

There are features about the great Republican victory in Maine, aside from the overwhelming majority in figures, which utterly preclude the coalition allies from enjoying a gram of consolation of any character whatsoever. A spasmodic and futile attempt is made to show that it is not equal to 1868 in point of majority. It will exceed that on 17,000, in a total vote of 125,000; and when the ratio of gain in the total vote has been uniform throughout, who will question that with an aggregate vote equal to that of 1868, viz., 131,700, the majority would not have been substantially the same as in that year? But take a true test. How does the vote of Maine affect the question of the north and standing of the Republican Administration under President Grant? It is not worthy of public confidence, and if it has been growing from bad to worse, as its assailants assert, then the logic of figures and majorities should show the fact proven by the popular judgment. Take, then, the average majority of the three years' Administration under President Grant, viz.:

| | |
|---|---|
| Chamberlain, September, 1869, (plurality) | 15,261 |
| Perham, September, 1870 | 8,298 |
| Perham, September, 1871 | 16,701 |
| Average majority | 10,424 |
| Majority in September, 1872 | 16,600 |

Now compare the above with three years prior to 1868, which will include part of the war period and the revulsion of 1867:

| | |
|---|---|
| Curry, September, 1865 | 26,621 |
| Chamberlain, September, 1866 | 27,660 |
| Chamberlain, September, 1867 | 11,343 |
| Average majority | 20,617 |
| Majority in September, 1868 | 19,816 |

Then it will be seen that the majority of the present year holds a more favorable comparison with its predecessors than did the majority of 1868. If there is a particle or comfort that the scrubheads can draw from this, it is that it will only take about twenty years at this rate for them to reclaim the State of Maine.

The sweeping character of the victory shows conclusively that it was no mere impulse that swayed the people. The splendid gains in the First, Third and Fifth Districts, where the opposition counted most, show that the Republicans of those localities were fully aware of the intentions of the enemy, and they made corresponding efforts to meet them, with most encouraging results. In the Second and Fourth Districts the contest was not so severe, and the gains not so heavy in proportion to the Republican vote, although the majorities are overwhelming. Looking at those minor causes which did affect the vote somewhat, it is but truth to say, and no candid man conversant with the facts will deny it, that but for the prejudice on the cider question in Portland and Bangor, and a local quarrel on the county-seat question in Somerset County, the Republican majority would now be even larger in proportion to the vote than in 1868. The manner in which Republicans in the main subordinated this liquor question to the other great questions at stake is worthy of all praise. It has really seemed to be more of an issue outside of the State than in it. Scarcely anywhere, save in Bangor and Portland, were the enemy able, even by the most diligent efforts, to force it upon the people. It had no place in the canvass, could only be brought in by being forced upon the attention of the people, and they naturally rejected it as a matter unworthy of consideration in comparison with the real issues of the canvass. In the two cities named local and individual prejudices were excited by the overzealous enforcement of the law by indirect officials. Bangor, nevertheless, overcame the attempt, and refused to suffer her majority of last year to be reduced. Portland was not able to resist quite so successfully, though her Republicans struggled manfully; so that cider, combined with Kimball's personal popularity, resulted in slightly reducing the small Republican majority of last year.

The one thing demonstrated beyond all question by this campaign is that "Liberal Republicanism" does not amount to a single unit in Maine. The vote of the two parties will show these astonishing facts—astonishing to those who have put faith in the boasts of the Greeleyites and their organs, that the Democratic ticket has not polled, in proportion to the aggregate, as many votes as in 1868! and that the Republicans, in proportion to the aggregate, fall little short of 1868. In other words, the so-called Liberal strength has not added a solitary vote to the coalition side. Their presence is not discoverable in the returns. And if they are there, then it follows that for every vacancy they created in the Republican ranks, a good Democratic recruit was furnished to fill it. This was undoubtedly the fact. Scores of instances have come to light since the election of Democrats who voted the regular Republican ticket, who were never suspected of such an intention in advance. And it only proves what some of the more sagacious leaders on both sides have maintained, that this loosening of party discipline would operate quite as potently upon the Democrats as upon the Republicans. Perhaps in no respect is the futility of the "Liberal" movement more forcibly illustrated than in the Third District. Every one will remember with what a parade Mr. Greeley came to Augusta. It was solely for the purpose of giving éclat to the mongrel Congressional Convention, which on that day put up Mr. Liberal Republican Lang to beat that "pertinacious young man," Mr. Blaine. There was a great deal said at the time about the number of signers to the call, and it was attempted to make a great sensation of the alleged fact that 408 votes were cast in convention for Mr. Lang's nomination. The votes were cast by anybody who chose to put a handful in the hat, which thing was actually done by boys and mischievous Republicans who were present. In vain do we look for these 840 at the polls. Not only does Mr. Blaine receive a larger majority than in 1870, but he goes several hundred better than in 1868, and in the entire district his vote will be found to be nearly one hundred better than that of the Governor. And right here I wish to call attention to the wonderful vote of this district. The counties composing the Second and Fourth not only did so well in 1868, but also in 1871, that it was hardly possible for them to show a greater improvement than they actually do. But the Third District, in which the majority at the Gubernatorial election in 1868 was 3,345, and in 1871 only 2,120, now not only outstrips last year, but gallantly goes ahead of even 1868 by nearly five hundred votes. And but for the county-seat quarrel in Somerset and the cider question, both entirely local, the majority would have been a round four thousand. So much for Mr. Greeley's "pertinacious young man." He has "reported" again, in a manner not as all acceptable to his political opponents, and they will not "miss" him until he ceases to handle the Republican campaigns of Maine.

One of the principal features of the campaign was the canvass made by the State Committee, under the direction of Mr. Blaine. There was very little said about its results in advance, for two reasons. It showed "strong" for a larger majority than Mr. Blaine believed probable, viz., 15,000; and also contained a much larger element of "doubtful" than usual. These canvasses have always heretofore proved a very reliable indication of the result; and the present one is now shown to be no exception. It was carefully made this year, and calculations made upon its basis showed a probable majority as above stated; this was fully realized, and the extent beyond this figure, which the majority has attained, shows the extent to which the Republicans received the doubtful vote. But it was this very doubtful vote, and a lingering suspicion that it might prove even larger than it appeared in the canvass, which put the managers of the campaign upon their guard, in order that no hopes should be raised only to be disappointed. But their own convictions were, nevertheless, very strong that the canvass would be fully sustained, as it has been. I remember asking Speaker Blaine the very first night I spent in the State when he thought the aggregate vote would be. He responded promptly that he thought the total would be about 125,000, of which Perham would have 70,000 and Kimball 55,000; "but," he added, "I don't want that penned." He will not be five hundred out of the way on Perham, and only overestimated Kimball's vote because he then credited him with a large proportion of the doubtful vote which he afterward himself obtained for Perham.

The campaign has been a very handsomely managed one, on the Republican side. If the Democrats did not do so well, it is because they had inexhaustible material to work with. The great majority of their speakers were of the "Liberal" sort, and they spent too great a portion of their time in vindicating themselves, and in trying to prove that they were just as good Republicans as ever. This did not suit Democratic stomachs. They longed for old-fashioned Democratic pabulum, and the new-fangled notions of Trumbull, Banks and the Cincinnati platform didn't awake any earnest enthusiasm. On the Republican side the campaign was rolled up from the beginning in superb style. Speaker Blaine began the work about the 20th of July, when the weather was hot and everybody inclined to avoid the work. He took at first "a ton of effect to raise an ounce of enthusiasm;" but the proportions were reached before the campaign was over. For the last two weeks no audience of enthusiasm could be obtained for a drop of the hot, while the demand for speakers for the closing grand rallies last Saturday night was far beyond the power of the Committee to supply, although there was an unusually large number in the State.

One further feature pertaining to the disposition of the Democratic Greeleyites notice in the closing lines of this letter. There has been no mistake upon which Republican speakers have dwelt with greater effect than upon the fact that if Greeley is elected by the Democracy his Administration will be essentially Democratic. Mere assertion has not been relied on to prove this fact. Mr. Congressman Beck will be glad to learn that he has figured largely in this campaign, and unintentionally helped to swell the Republican majority. And so will Mr. Senator Stevenson, and likewise Mr. Congressman Goodloe, of Tennessee. Their imperfect testimony as to what use they propose to make of Mr. Greeley, if he is elected, has been produced again and again to enforce the fact upon the attention of the people of Maine, and they in turn have given heed to the warnings of these Southern gentlemen. They are to be congratulated upon having directed a greater influence upon the campaign in this direction than in any other. OYMON.

Enormous Majority for Gen. Hersey in the Fourth District.

BANGOR, Me., Sept. 13.—Returns received at the office of the Whig & Courier indicate that the majority for Hersey, Republican, in the Fourth Congressional District will exceed 8,000. This is the largest majority ever given in that District.

THE GREELEY EBB TIDE.

Hopeless Condition of the Scrubhead Campaign—Democrats Abandoning Greeley Everywhere.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—The political intelligence received here during the last few days is of the most cheering character. Letters received by prominent officials indicate that Greeley is losing ground in every section of the country, and that his campaign is entirely hopeless. Commissioner Douglass writes from Pennsylvania that there is no doubt that the entire State ticket will be elected in October. He says that the Democrats are everywhere becoming disgusted with the Liberal ticket, and are falling away by the thousand. Gen. Garfield, who has just returned from his Indian trip, says that Greeley has no chance whatever in the West, and that, so far as he could see, whatever strength he possessed has entirely passed away. In Virginia, according to trustworthy intelligence, thousands of Democratic voters will remain away from the polls, and if the canvass is only properly conducted in that State by the Republicans, it will give its electoral vote to Gen. Grant. The best friends of the Ammnstuon in that State insist that it is impolitic and unwise for Democratic nominations for Congress in districts that are hopelessly Democratic.

DEATH OF GEN. THAYER OFFICIALLY ANNOUNCED.

The War Department has published a general order announcing the death of Brevet Brig. Gen. Thayer, recounting events in his life. It says: "Returning from Europe in 1817, he was appointed Superintendent of the Military Academy, and served in that capacity for sixteen years, during which time, under his able administration, the Academy, from a rudimentary school became one justly celebrated throughout the land, serving at once as a fostering mother to the army, as the pioneer instructor of the engineers of most of the public works of the country, and as a monument of his own fame. On retiring from the Military Academy in 1866, Col. Thayer was charged with the construction of the permanent defenses of Boston Harbor, which was nearly completed according to his designs, under his own supervision, and which will long serve as models of engineering construction. Gen. Thayer's administration of his public trusts was able, upright, economical and faithful. Enthusiastic in his profession, and emulous of reputation, he was not envious of others. Though reserved in manner, he was always courteous, and while avoiding controversy, he did not hesitate to declare his opinion, and to sustain them by argument. The great worth and services of this veteran soldier are gratefully remembered by the graduates of the military academy of which he was justly styled "the Father," and his name will be entwined with the laurels which many of them have gathered on the battle-field. As a tribute to his memory the officers of the Corps of Engineers will wear the usual military badge of mourning for thirty days, and the day after the receipts of this order at West Point, half-hour guns will be fired, beginning at sunrise and ending at sunset, the national flag being displayed at half staff during that time.

REVENUE MODIFICATION.

It appears, from a circular just issued by the Internal Revenue Bureau, that the provisions of Special No. 120, page 2, which provides for the marks and brands to be put upon a package in use or intended to be used in the sale of fermented liquors, are so far modified as to provide that gangers, after having determined the capacity of the package, in beer gallons, will brand on the bottom of each cask their name and office, date of gauge, the district and the denomination of the stamp. This brand will be varied so as to correctly show the stamp required, by substituting for the words "one dollar" the words "two dollars," "fifty cents," "twenty-five cents," "sixteen and a third cents," or twelve and a half cents, as the case may be. When the kind of stamp is represented by even dollars, the marks will be branded on in letters in full but when the stamp required is less than a dollar stamp, the fractional part of the dollar may be branded on in figures of not less than one inch in length. The brewer is to be notified by the gauger when the cask overruns in capacity the quantity specified in Special No. 20, and opportunity be given him to reduce the cask to the proper capacity before it is branded. In making out their bills for gauging beer-casks, gangers will charge for beer gallons capacity the fee prescribed in supplement to Special No. 116 for proof gallons contents for gauging at distilleries.

Defrauding the Government.

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 13.—Suits have been entered in the United States District Court against Messrs. White, Browne & Co., importers of English dry goods, doing business on the corner of Franklin and Hawley streets, for defrauding the Government of duties to the amount of $160,000. The alleged frauds extend from August, 1867, to November, 1869.

The records at the United States Court show that the property of White, Brown & Co. was attached to the amount of $250,000 during the month last past. The writ on the file covers a series of charges, extending from Aug. 1, 1867, to Nov. 15, 1869, and would make a small volume if it were printed. The articles are chiefly cloth and worsted goods, on which there are three rates of duties, ranging from six to eight cents per square yard, and from thirty to forty per cent. ad valorem. It is alleged that Messrs. White, Brown & Co. entered first-class goods as second-class, and second-class goods as belonging to the third classification, hence making money at the expense of the Government. The firm is composed of Messrs. Joseph H. and James White

A MASSACRE BY MORMONS.

Slaughter in Cold Blood of a Company of Emigrants.

Affidavit of a Mormon Bishop who Saw the Mountain Meadows Butchery—The Mormon Militia and their Officers the Murderers, Under Orders from Head-Quarters—Cowardly Strategy of the Saints.

SALT LAKE CITY, Sept. 12.—The following is the affidavit in full by one of the least guilty among the participants in the affair, showing conclusively that the terrible Mountain Meadows massacre was the act of the Mormon authorities. It will be remembered that a large company of emigrants, on their way to California, are known to have been all killed, with the exception of the young children. When their massacre was discovered, the Mormons set afloat the story that they had perished by the hands of the Indians; but from time to time circumstantial evidence has appeared indicating that they were murdered in cold blood by the Mormons in revenge for previous outrages upon the latter, perpetrated in Illinois and Missouri. A competent witness now states under oath that the Mormon militia attacked the emigrants, and after a fight of several days without result, sent a flag of truce, offering them protection if they would lay down their arms. The terms being complied with, the entire party was butchered by their captors:

STATE OF NEVADA, COUNTY OF LINCOLN, SS.—Personally appeared before me, Peter B. Miller, Clerk of Court of the Seventh Judicial District of the State of Nevada, Philip Klingon Smith, who being duly sworn, on his oath says: My name is Philip Klingon Smith. I resided in the County of Lincoln, in the State of Nevada. I resided at Cedar City, in the County of Iron, in the Territory of Utah, from A. D. 1862 to A. D. 1869. I was residing at Cedar City at the time of the massacre at Mountain Meadows in said Territory of Utah. I had heard that a company of emigrants was on its way from Salt Lake City, bound for California. Said company arrived at said Cedar City; tarried there one day, and passed on for California. After said company had left Cedar City, the militia was called out for the purpose of committing acts of hostility against them. Said call was a regular military call from the superior officers to the subordinate officers and privates of the regiment at Cedar City and vicinity, composing a part of the militia of the Territory of Utah. I do not recollect the number of the regiment. I was at that time the Bishop of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints at Cedar City. Isaac C. Haight was President over said church at Cedar City and settlement settlements in said Territory. My position as Bishop was subordinate to that of said President. W. H. Dame was President of said church at Parowan, in said Iron County. Said W. H. Dame was also Colonel of said regiment. Said Isaac C. Haight was Lieutenant-Colonel of said regiment, and said John D. Lee, of Harmony, in said county, was Major of said regiment. Said regiment was duly ordered to muster, armed and equipped as the law directs, and prepared for field operations. I had no command nor office in said regiment at that time, neither did I march with said regiment on the said expedition to which reference is made, being massacred at the Mountain Meadows, in said County of Iron. About four days after said company of emigrants had left Cedar City, that portion of said regiment then mustered at Cedar City, took up its line of march in pursuit of said company. About two days after said company had left said Cedar City, Lieut.-Col. J. C. Haight expressed in my presence a desire that said company might be permitted to pass on their way in peace; but afterward he told me that he had orders from head-quarters to kill all emigrants except the small children. I do not know whether said head-quarters meant the regimental head-quarters at Parowan, or the head quarters of the Commander-in-Chief at Salt Lake City.

When the said company had got to Iron Creek, about twenty (20) miles from Cedar City, Major Joel White started for the Pinto Creek settlement, through which said company would pass, for the purpose of influencing the people to permit said company to pass on their way in peace. I asked and obtained permission of said White to go with him, and said him in his endeavors to save life. When said White and myself got about three miles from Cedar City, we met Major John D. Lee, who asked us where we were going. I replied that we were going to try to prevent the killing of the emigrants. Lee replied, "I have something to say about that." Lee was at that time on his way to Parowan, the head-quarters of Col. Dawe. Said White and I went to Pinto Creek, remained there one night, and the next day returned to Cedar City, meeting said company of emigrants at Iron Creek. Before reaching Cedar City we met one Jim Allen, who told us that "the decree had passed devoting said company to destruction." After the fight had been going on for three or four days a messenger from Major Lee reached Cedar City, who stated that the fight had not been altogether successful, upon which Lieut.-Col. Haight ordered out a reinforcement. At the time I was ordered out by Capt. John M. Higby, who ordered me to muster, "armed and equipped as the law directs." It was a matter of life or death to me to muster or not, and I mustered; and the reinforcement I met with at this time that Lieut.-Col. Haight said to me that it was the orders from head-quarters that all but the little children of said company were to be killed. Said Haight had at that time just returned from head-quarters, at Parowan, where a military council had been held. There had been a like council held at Parowan previous to that, at which were present Col. Dawe, Lieut.-Col. J. C. Haight and Major John D. Lee. The result of this first council was the calling out of said regiment for the purpose already stated. The reinforcement aforesaid was marched to the Mountain Meadows and there formed a junction with the main body. Major Lee massed all the troops at a spring, and made a speech to them, saying that his orders from "head-quarters were to kill the entire company, except the small children." I was not in the ranks at that time, but on one side, talking to a man named Slade, and could not have seen a paper in Major Lee's hands. Said Lee then sent a flag of truce into the emigrant camp, offering said emigrants that "if they lay down their arms he would protect them." They accordingly laid down their arms, came out from their camp, and delivered themselves up to said Lee. The women and children were then, by the order of said Lee, separated from the men and were within sight and hearing of the men. After said women and children had marched about a half a mile toward Cedar City, the order was given to shoot them down. At that time said Lee was at the head of the column; I was in the rear; I did not hear Lee give the order to fire, but heard it from the under officers as it was passed down the column. The emigrants were then and there shot down, except seventeen little children, which I immediately took into my charge. I do not know the total number of said company, as I did not stop to count the dead. I immediately put the little children in baggage-wagons belonging to the regiment, and took them to Hamlin's Ranch, and from there to Cedar City, and procured them homes among the people. John Willis and Samuel Murdy assisted me in taking charge of said children.

On the evening of the massacre, Col. W. H. Dawe and Lieut. J. C. Haight came to Hamlin's, where I had the said children, and fell into a dispute, in the course of which said Haight told Col. Dawe that if he was going to report of the killing of said emigrants, "he should not have ordered it done." I do not know when or where said troops were disbanded. About two weeks after said massacre, securred said Major Lee (who was also Indian Agent) went to Salt Lake City, and, as I believe, reported said fight and its results to the Commander-in-Chief. I was not present at either of the before-mentioned councils, nor at any council connected with the aforesaid military operations, or with said company; I gave no orders among the troops, nor with the saving of the children, and none after the massacre had occurred, and said orders were given as Bishop and not in a military sense. At the time of the firing of the first volley I discharged my piece. I did not fire afterward, though several subsequent volleys were fired. After the first fire was delivered I saw one see about saving the children. I commenced to gather up the children before the firing had ceased.

I have made the foregoing statement before the above-entitled Court for the reason that I believed that I would be assassinated should I attempt to make the same before any Court in the Territory of Utah. After said Lee returned from Salt Lake City, as aforesaid, said Lee told me that he had reported fully to the President, meaning the Commander-in-Chief, the fight at Mountain Meadows, and the killing of said emigrants. Brigham Young was at that time the Commander-in-Chief of the militia of the Territory of Utah. And further deponent saith not.

LABOR IN ITALY.

Wages of Laborers and Mechanics in Carrara—Education Spreading Since 1859—The Quarries.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 12.—In reply to a circular issued by the Bureau of Statistics in the early part of last June, the following interesting letter has been received from Franklin Torrey, Esq., United States Consul at Carrara, Italy. The United States equivalent of Italian money is given in parenthesis.

The price of labor in this consular district averages as follows:

For marble-sculptors, from 4 to 5 lire, (76 to 96 cents, gold,) per day.

For marble-cutters, from 3 to 3 lire, (58 to 58 cents, gold,) per day.

For marble-polishers, from 1 80-100 to 2½ lire, (34 to 46 cents, gold,) per day.

For marble-quarrymen, from 1½ to 2½ lire, (28 to 48 cents, gold,) per day.

Blacksmiths, carpenters, masons, painters and shoemakers average about 2 lire (38 cents gold) per day. The common laborer from 1½ to 1 lire (29 cents to 20 cents gold) per day.

All mechanics work from sunrise until dark the year round, taking three hours a day for their meals in the Summer months, and two hours a day during the short days of the Autumn and Winter.

Boys and women earn from 50 100 to 1 lire (18 cents to 19¼ cents gold) per day in the quarries.

The principal article produced is marble, which gives employment for nearly the whole population of the district.

The silver and lead mines of Serravezza are very valuable, but not extensive. House rent and living expenses for the mechanics and laborers are very low, quite in proportion to their earnings, but the average rent of a good house containing ten rooms is 1,500 lire ($289 57) per annum.

The mechanics and laborers are very poor; they know not what comfort is. They usually have large families, and live in one or two rooms of a house where they cook, eat and sleep; I have known many instances where families of from five to eight persons, men, women and children, lived and slept in one room. Under these circumstances their education and morals may be imagined.

Few mechanics and laborers over thirty years of age can read and write, the better class of marble-cutters only excepted. Since the revolution of 1859 common public schools have existed, and nearly all children learn to read and write.

The value of marble, wrought and unwrought, exported to the United States direct during the year 1871, was $248,044 71-100 lire ($238,547 85.) A large portion of the most valuable sculpture and architectural work is sent to Florence, Rome, Leghorn, Genoa and Marseilles, and from thence to the United States as productions of those places.

There is also a large amount of olive-oil produced in this district and exported to the United States via Leghorn.

Carrara is a town of Northern Italy, a few miles distant from the Mediterranean, in what was formerly the Duchy of Modena. It derives its importance from its quarries, the marbles of which have been exported for upward of 2,000 years, and still appear inexhaustible in quantity. They are of various shades, but the most highly prized is the transparent white marble used for statuary, of which, however, the quantity obtained is small in comparison with that of the inferior kinds.

MORE CITY FRAUDS.

A Bill Increased Over One Thousand Per Cent.

Another of those mandamus cases against the Board of Audit, to compel the payment of claims against the City, in which the defense is fraud and overcharges, came up for argument before Judge Leonard in Supreme Court, Chambers, yesterday. The claim is made by Byrnes & Coppers, for putting in gas-fixtures, water-closets, &c., in the Hall of Records, and amounts to over $2,500. The claim had been audited and allowed by the old Board of Supervisors, who directed Controller Green to pay, but the latter refused, on the ground that the bill was fraudulently exorbitant. In support of this theory, and in opposition to a motion for a mandamus to compel the present Board of Audit to pass upon the bill formally, and direct the Controller to pay, affidavits from several members of firms dealing in gas-fixtures in this City were read to the effect that the materials furnished were comparatively small compared with the amount charged for, and that the prices were enormously excessive; that the whole work and materials were worth, at a fair value, something less than $200. To illustrate the fraud, the affidavits proceed to state particularly that in the bill furnished and audited by the Board of Supervisors there were 622 feet of gas-pipe charged for, while only 167 feet were furnished; 1,262 pounds of lead, but only 280 furnished; 215 pounds of solder, but only 15 pounds furnished; 2 brass pumps, but only one furnished; 2 water-closets, but no evidence of even 1 having been furnished; 135 days' work of gas-fitter, but 5 days necessary for work done, and less than 15 days, if all the material charged for had been furnished; 126 days for plumbing-work, but 6 days sufficient for work done, and but 20 days, if all the work charged for had been done. As to prices, it is alleged that gas-pipe charged at forty cents was worth but fifteen cents; gas-pipe at thirty-five cents, worth twelve cents; brackets charged at $36, worth but $10; lead pipe and sheet-lead charged at twenty cents, worth but thirteen cents; water-closets charged at $66, worth but $10; wages charged at $7 50 per day, worth but $5 50.

The argument before the Court on behalf of the claimant, by Mr. Brooke, his attorney, was that the audit and allowance of the claim by the old Board of Supervisors was conclusive, and that it now rested with the present Board of Audit to merely formally allow the claim at the amount fixed by its predecessor.

On behalf of the City and in opposition to the claim, Mr. Dean argued that, the claim being unpaid, it was still within the control of the present Board of Audit, who had a right to go into its merits and cut it down to such amount as they might discover to be just, or disallow it altogether.

Judge Leonard took the papers and reserved his decision.

BOATING.

The Beaverwyck Boat Club, of Albany, recently issued a challenge to any six-oared crew to row them a three-mile race at Albany. Their neighbors, the Mutual Boat Club, of the same city, accepted the defi, and the result was a gig race, which took place on Monday last, over a straight-away three-mile course, with the tide, starting from a point off the lower portion of the city. The Beaverwycks rowed in good form, and led by a length before the second mile was reached, and then the Mutuals went to the front, and were again overtaken by the Beaverwycks, who then held them bow and bow. When near the goal, the Mutuals, by a fine spurt, shot a half-length to the front, and remained there to the end, winning the race in seventeen minutes thirty-eight seconds.

A shell race between the two Clubs is arranged to take place on Monday next, over the same course.

The Atlantic Boat Club, of Hoboken, will have two races to-morrow, on the old Association course, at Hoboken. The first will be for the championship of the Club, the separants therefor being Mr. Andrew Dunignac and Mr. Robert Lefin-an, formerly of the Shippen Club. A gig race between members of the Club will then take place.

On Monday next, one of the most interesting races of the season will come off in the Kills between the Argonauts Rowing Association and the Neptune Boating Association, both prominent rowing organizations. The Neptunes have proved victorious in the two annual contests, '70 and '71—and the Argonautas have prepared themselves to cope vigorously with their rivals for the champion flag of '72. But the Neptunes have not been idle either; their crew has rowed very steadily for practice, and trained closely, and from the appearance of both crews, it is an easy matter to predict an unusually good race.

The Atalantas intend to locate on the shores of the Harlem River next season.

The Harlem Bay, recently organized, has changed its name to the Harlem Regatta Association. Mr. John C. Babcock, of the Nassau Boat Club, has been elected as President; Mr. Eugene Earle, of the Athletic Club, Vice-President; Mr. Richard L. Neville, of the Manhattan Boat Club, Secretary and Treasurer.

Several of our boat clubs intend making a tour around Manhattan Island before the season closes.

Another Land Swindler.

Charles B. Orvis, a well-dressed and apparently respectable man, was arraigned at the Tombs Police Court, yesterday, by Detective Bennett, of the Central Office, charged with swindling. The complaint was made by Mr. Nathan E. Reynolds, of No. 32 Chestnut-street, Brooklyn, who alleged that on the 28th of May last Orvis came to his place of business, Nos. 68 and 71 Liberty-street, and purchased $1,300 worth of hoop-skirts. Orvis said he was unable to pay cash, but gave three notes due in thirty, sixty and ninety days, secured by a warrantee deed of 3,120 acres of land in Barry and Stone Counties, Missouri, which he said he had received from the Government by letters patent. The goods were delivered to him. The notes were never paid, and on inquiry Mr. Reynolds found that Orvis never owned any land in Missouri. The prisoner, on being arraigned, was held for trial in default of $1,500 bail.

HUNGARY.

Changes in the Country—Railroads—Pesth.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PESTH, Saturday, Aug. 24, 1872.

Your correspondent returns to Hungary, after an interval of twenty-one years, to find a change and progress such as is seldom seen in a European country. The period of my first visit (in 1851) was just after the revolution, when a prodigious effort had been made by the nation to throw off the absolutism of Austria, which had notably failed, and the whole people had sunk again into a state of passive resistance and helplessness. The enthusiasm of the great uprising and its failure had been followed by its natural reaction. The people were depressed and despairing. Austria, or the House of Hapsburgh, which in all its history never knew how to be magnanimous, tried again the stupid, brutal means of repression, which in so many centuries it had found so successful in repressing freedom and extinguishing nationality. Magnanimity might have won the Hungarians; cruelty and oppression only solidified them against the Empire. In those years of my first visit, the prisons of the land were filled with men and women, the flower of the nation, who had been open enemies, but whom a Hapsburgher could never forgive. Each village and town was marked by the tombs and memorials of those executed after the war was over, and usually men of such character and talent as a nation cannot easily spare. It seemed as if the brutal purpose were to extinguish the best manhood of Hungary. Had such magnanimity occured to the counselors of the Emperor, or the slightest shade of it, as was shown to our rebellious States after the war, the fifteen years of depression which followed would have quickly changed, and the campaign which prostrated Austria before Prussia might have had a different ending.

The nation, in 1851, was a victim of spies, soldiers and Austrian officials. It had no life of its own. Its resources, small as they then were, were all sucked out to sustain the enormous military outlays of the Government of Vienna. Moreover, it lay crushed under the absolutist system, which had so long stupidly held that the depression and prostration of Hungary was the elevation of Austria. No improvements were encouraged; no railroads built; no trade developed. The outward growth of the nation in commerce was checked by every kind of prohibitive and protective duty. Hungary had really no outlet to the world.

It need not be said that all this, though it depressed and stupefied the people, did not really extinguish its national instincts. The noble dead whose graves covered so many village knolls, and the blood of the best and bravest which sprinkled so many scaffolds, were only a fresh pledge and an eternal reminder of the duty of the survivors to "country and liberty." Faith to Hungary became a religion, which grew stronger under persecution.

Of the gradual steps which brought about a change and the renovation of Hungary I shall not here speak. The providential retribution of tyranny came upon Austria, and in the hour of her great trial she found that absolutism had only made a weak conglomeration of States, which had no chance of success against a united and intelligent people, contented with its Government and employing the elements of freedom.

The change which strikes the eye in Hungary is something wonderful. In those years, she seemed a semi-oriental land, with the relics of Western feudalism everywhere, and utterly destitute of the means of modern improvement and progress.

RAILROADS.

In 1851, there was but one railroad in the interior of the country—from Pest h to Szolnok, some sixty miles in length—and I traveled throughout the land in wretched post-wagons over horrible roads, or was forwarded in the carriages of my friends. In many villages, the products could not be brought to market, and from some of the richest districts there was no opportunity of export. The land was rich in corn and wine, in fruit, wheat and cattle, but there was scarcely any connection with the outer world.

It always seemed to me then that, like our Western country, the interior only needed railroads to develop wealth to an amazing degree.

Hungary is a kind of vast prairie, begirt with mountainous districts. The smaller hills on the borders of this prairie are the vine hills where such famous wines are produced, and the higher mountains on the outskirts of the country contain the treasures of gold, copper, iron and coal yet to be developed. The central plain is a vast region which, though not equal to our prairies in richness, is still fertile enough to support a great population. Its especial products are Indian corn, wheat, fruit and grass. To bring out this wealth, and to carry the products of the vineyards to market, some two thousand miles of railroad have been built in every direction. Like our prairie roads, those on the Presets require comparatively little expense, but those penetrating the mountain borders of the country are works often of vast expense and difficulty.

From Pesth, directly east, a road has been constructed through Gross Wardein, the mountain passes of Transylvania, Klausenburg, through the Maros valleys, and finally among the mountains to Kronstadt, there to connect with Bucharest, the Black Sea and Constantinople. There are still other branches through Arad, Karlsburgh and Bernannstadt, in like manner connecting with Wallachia and Turkey, while a branch brings the coal mines of Petrosney in connection with the interior.

South from Pesth, a great line through Szegedin and Temesvar unites the Banat with Central Hungary. Through all these lines, the wines of Transylvania, its cattle and mineral products are brought near the markets of the world, and the rich products, mineral and vegetable, of Southern Hungary can be transported to the capital and to Germany.

On the north again, numerous lines bring the wines and minerals to the market in Pest,h or connect the whole country with Bohemia, Poland and Prussia.

There will shortly be an uninterrupted railroad connection between Pesth and Warsaw, and Pesth and Moscow. On the west again, a new and shorter line will soon be finished between Pesth and Vienna; one is in process of construction between Pesth and Grats; the line between Fiume and Pest is nearly done—a work of vast difficulty; and the connection between Pesth and Trieste is complete. The whole important region between the Platten See and the Danube is thrown open by different lines. In fact, the whole country is opened by railroads, and numerous others are planned or in process of construction.

Where they are deficient, good lines of coaches and diligences bring the passengers rapidly to the desired points.

THE RESULTS.

Under the reviving power of railroads, Pesth has become another city. Its ancient, easy, semi-oriental character has given place to a stirring, modern, busy aspect. Enormous blocks of stately buildings have been erected; the handsome "Academy" has been built near the Danube; piers have been made, and the river is alive with steamboats and vessels bringing the products of the interior. Steam-mills have been built and great numbers of streets added. Water has been introduced, pumped up by steam from the river. In Ofen, tunnels are made, a steam railroad climbs right up the historic hill in a most frightful manner, and a horse railroad passes over the old battle-fields of the Turks and Huns.

There seems as much difficulty about dwellings as in New-York. Everybody is complaining of rents! Prices have risen in an alarming manner. Hotels are as expensive as in America. Wages are high (for Hungary.) The papers are no longer crowded with advertisements of lotteries, but of investments. Most of the advertising seems to be given to all the numberless devices and societies for drawing out the savings of the farmers and gentry.

In fact, Hungary as well as Germany has joined the grand industrial march of modern nations, and finds it by no means all a path of roses.

All this advance has occurred within the last seven or ten years.

SCHOOLS.

In the intellectual field the change is even more striking. Five years ago there was not a single respectable public school in the city. Now there are twenty-nine ward schools, with 140 teachers; thirteen people's schools, connected with parishes, with forty-five teachers, besides fifty private schools and two citizens' schools. Female teachers have been introduced—an improvement to which Germany has hardly attained; and no question of religious creed is made in the appointments. The "Hungarian Academy" has been opened to cultivate science, literature and the arts, forming a central point for the best thought of Hungary. The "Museum," under her Pulsky, has become a most important institution, with an unequaled collection in some branches. Newspapers have multiplied to an incredible extent. All is life and progress.

THE EXPRESS NUISANCE.

Experience of Numerous Victims of Dodd's Express or the New-York Transfer Company—Persons Insulted Who Demand Their Rights.

The complaints that daily reach the office of the TIMES from respectable persons who have been made the victims of the mismanagement and criminal carelessness of the New-York Transfer Company, (a combination of Dodd's, Studley's and Westcott's Expresses,) leave no doubt on the minds of thoughtful persons that the system of "baggage smashing" is again in force, but in somewhat of a legalized form. Not only is luggage detained beyond all reasonable time to account for accidental delays, but in many cases does not reach the hands of the proper owners at all; and in these latter instances the applicants for the missing property are either dismissed with an unsatisfactory answer or insulted by some insignificant clerk.

The complaint of the "little girl" who was kept at Long Branch several days without a change of clothing by the willful carelessness of one of "Mr. Dodd's enterprising drivers," who thrust her luggage into a stable near Twenty-eighth-street, and left it there despite the repeated application for its delivery, is but one of the many that have been made, and is only a counterpart of the complaint sent by the Brooklyn gentleman whose valise was detained from Monday, Sept. 2, until Friday, Sept. 6, when the distance to be traveled over was from the Company's office in Brooklyn to the Morris and Essex Railroad Depot in Hoboken. In this latter case the gentleman had paid for the transfer of his baggage beforehand, and the delay caused a severe loss to him. When he stated these facts to the official at the Brooklyn office he was grossly insulted, and in the most vulgar language.

The following is an aggravated case: A gentleman and lady from Boston arrived in New-York by the midnight train on Tuesday, Sept. 3, and put up at the Fifth-avenue Hotel for the night, giving their trunk to Dodd's Express to be sent to the Thirtieth-street Station, thence to Yonkers, their destination. This trunk has since been seen nor can its whereabouts, after a vigorous search, be ascertained. The brother of the lady, a gentleman holding a high official position in this City, has been engaged during the past ten days vainly hunting between the West Thirtieth-street and the East Twenty-second-street Station, and the general office on Broadway, near Twenty-third street. No satisfaction can be had, as the General Agent is never to be found in his office, and Studley throws the blame on Dodd, while the latter insists it is Westcott's fault, as they all belong to the same Company. No check upon the baggage is kept at the shipping offices and if, by mistake, the trunk has been sent to Chicago, Albany, St. Louis, or any of the intervening railroad stations, there appears to be no means of finding it out. The lady is a lady away from home, deprived of her baggage, and no one can be found to be held responsible.

An old traveler for a commission house in Philadelphia arrived in this City a few days ago with a trunk containing valuable samples. He placed his trunk in charge of Dodd's Express, or rather the New-York Transfer Company, to be delivered to him the next day at Stamford, Conn., he in the meantime being anxious to secure a night's rest in this City. Next morning he pursued his journey to Stamford, and waited two days in vain (notwithstanding several telegrams had been sent) for the trunk of samples. He then returned to New-York, saw the agent to whom he had delivered the trunk, was told it had gone on, and when he persisted it had not reached Stamford, was told to go to the Central and find his trunk. After a laborious search the trunk was found in the Company's office, smashed nearly to pieces and the samples completely ruined. The traveler intends seeking redress through law Courts, for both loss of time and property.

On Sept. 3, a gentleman now at Plainfield, N. J., arrived in this City with a lady and his daughter by the Hudson River Railroad. He gave the checks for his baggage to Westcott, and went in Westcott's coach to the Central Railroad of New-Jersey. The baggage, however, did not arrive, and a whole week was occupied in looking for it. At the end of that time it was delivered at its destination, but not until it had been badly damaged by repeated concussions with harder substances.

About two weeks ago a gentleman of Hartford, Conn., arrived in this City from Philadelphia, and fearing that he would not connect with the 3 P. M. train to New-Haven, committed Dodd's agent on the cars, and was told that his stage would not be there in time, but for $3 he would be conveyed there, "sure." The money was paid, but when the gentleman arrived in New-York, he applied unsuccessfully to the man who received the money for the conveyance. The agent was then too busy attending to the regular transfer-stage, and had no time to think of him; but when the gentleman applied for a return of the money, the information was received that he, the agent "was not authorized to return money." After some further delay, a carriage was supplied, which took the traveler to the Twenty-seventh-street Station, where it arrived about fifteen minutes after the train had left. The driver of the carriage then offered to catch the train at Forty-second-street, if another dollar was paid; but as the gentleman knew full well that the train had already left that depot, he refused to pay the amount, and resolved in future to trust to ordinary conveyances, rather than the Transfer Company, when desirous of crossing the City.

These are but a few of the cases that have been brought to notice, but will serve to illustrate the system that is adopted by these monopolist expressmen, who have combined apparently to rob the traveling public of their time, patience, money and property.

The Nail Manufacturers.

The spike and nail manufacturers of the Atlantic States have advanced their rates for cut nails and spikes, owing to a recent advance in the price of pig-iron.

The following are the new prices upon which there is a discount of fifteen cents on all purchases from 100 to 1,000 kegs, and twenty cents on all those from 1,000 to 2,000 kegs:

| | Per keg. | | Per keg. |
|---|---|---|---|
| 10d. to 6d., common | $6 50 | 10d. | $7 10 |
| 8d. and 9d. | 6 35 | 8d. and 9d., fine | 6 85 |
| 6d. and 7d. | 6 20 | Catspikes, all sizes | 6 25 |
| 4d and 5d. | 6 75 | | |

Fencing and sheathing same prices as common. Finishing, flooring, box, coopers, casing, slating, trunk and tobacco, as follows: 3d., $6; 4d. and 5d., $7 25; 6d., $7; 8d., $6 75; 10d. and larger, $6 50. Cut nails, 2 and 2¼ inch, $6; 1½ and 2¼ inch, $7 75; 1 inch and longer, $7 50. In half-kegs fifty cents per cwt. more than the above.

GEORGIA SLANDERS FOR POLITICAL EFFECT.

Malicious Charges Against Mr. Henry Clews, the Banker—Exposed and Contradicted by Mr. J. E. Conant, the Georgia Railroad Commissioner.

A TIMES reporter called upon Mr. J. E. Conant, of the firm of J. Edwin Conant & Co., of No. 120 Broadway, yesterday, to obtain whatever information he could give in regard to the Brunswick and Albany Railroad of Georgia, his firm having constructed the larger portion of the railroad. Mr. Conant affirmed in the most positive manner that the recent statements of the Tribune in regard to the connection of Mr. Henry Clews with transactions in issuing bonds, entering into contracts, &c., were base fabrications, and said that Mr. Clews had no connection with the roadster issue of bonds by railroads in Georgia upon which he advanced money to be used for the purposes of construction, except in the way of legitimate banking operations; neither had he any interest or connection with contractors, or any profits, nor benefits in any way whatever, except in the usual and legitimate line of his banking business; in fact, when offered as an inducement to him to advance upon the securities, that he should have an interest in the contract to build the Brunswick and Albany, and also Darisville and Van More Bonds, in both of which Mr. Conant was contractor, he peremptorily declined, and the dealings with him was on a purely banking basis.

Mr. Conant gave the following history of the road and his own connection with it, which completely exonerates Mr. Henry Clews from the charges which have been brought against him for political purposes:

I did not be a railroad contractor, and in the Summer of 1869 was given a contract to build the Brunswick and Albany Railroad of Georgia. At that time I found the Board of Railroad Directors to consist of a number of respectable New-York gentlemen, among whom were Jacob R. Taylor, D. R. Martin, O. D. P. Grant, Charles L. Frost, Henry S. Wells, Chauncey Tilbury, Judge Avery and Ex-Gov. Mattison. I found on examination that the railroad had been built prior to the rebellion a distance of sixty miles. During the war the rails had been taken up and a portion taken by the State of Georgia to repair its own road, and the balance of the iron was distributed among the other roads of the State. Upon the collapse of the rebellion the bond-holders foreclosed the mortgage which they held, and took possession of the road to satisfy their bonds. They then formed a new company, and issued stock to secure their interests in the road. They also procured a renewal of their chartered rights from the Legislature. They then demanded of the State compensation for the iron which it took during the rebellion, and in consideration of this claim the State guaranteed the first-mortgage bonds of the Company to the extent of $15,000 a mile. Fifty miles of the road had to be built in one year from the passage of this act, which was dated March 17, 1869, otherwise the indorsement would not be good. At the time I made my contract I did not know H. L. Kimball nor Gov. Bullock. I stipulated with the directors that I should have the placing of four persons in the Board and the selection of the officers of the Company during the pendency of my contract. Charles L. Frost was selected for President, Henry Clews as Treasurer, and Henry C. Mattison, Secretary. Mr. Clews' duties as Treasurer were to be merely nominal, as is usual with roads during construction, the requirements of him as such officer being only to turn the bonds and stock over to the President and Trustees appointed by the Board. Responsible men were selected to give character and responsibility to the enterprise, as well as for my own protection. The bonds and stock which I was to receive for building the road were put into the hands of the Trustees, and were to be turned over as I got the road finished and in sections of ten miles. This was done in accordance with the act of the Legislature, which required the road to be completed in sections of ten miles before the bonds were indorsed. The officers of the Company were required to execute a contract and place them in the hands of the Committee, to be ready for delivery as the road was completed. Neither Mr. Frost, Mr. Clews nor Mr. Mattison were ever interested with me in the contract to build this road. When Mr. Clews commenced making advances to me to carry on my work I offered him a quarter interest in the contract, which he declined, giving as his reason that it would make him liable for the debts of the contractors, and consequently did not wish to be interested in such contracts. Although I commenced the work in August, when everything had to be sent from New-York to Georgia and labor was scarce and difficult to get, I prosecuted the work with such vigor that at the middle of March I had sixty miles of the road finished. During this time I was continually harrassed by the Georgia Central Railroad interest, which was and is antagonistic to the interests of the Brunswick and Albany Railroad. About this time I made the acquaintance of Mr. H. L. Kimball, brother of the Democratic candidate for Governor of Maine who was recently defeated, and as he had a great deal of influence in Georgia, I arranged for him to take an interest in the contract. He, he, he was to furnish $100,000, which he failed to do, and on the 17th day of November following, when we had 100 miles of the road completed, I and my partner (Mr. Wm. L. Avery) sold out our interest to this Mr. H. L. Kimball, he agreeing to pay the balance of the debts of the Company. He plied me day and night to induce me to remain, and I, vacillating any more money, and Mr. Kimball employed as the financial agent of the Company Mr. S. H. Kneeland, who negotiated all the loans and transacted all the business at this end for the Company, and I left the indorsements with him.

Up to this date no bonds were indorsed by the State only as the road was built, in accordance with the law. Every bond which I received had the indorsement of N. L. Angier, Treasurer of the State, who satisfied himself that the work was done, and the security good before he gave his indorsement. These bonds were negotiated by a New-York German banking-house, through their connections in Frankfort and Berlin, and there is not the shadow of doubt that the State is in duty and honor bound to pay these honest bonds, issued for honest work.

Some misunderstanding had arisen between Mr. Kimball, Gov. Bullock and N. L. Angier, and after I left the indorsements were, by act of Legislature, vested in the Governor instead of the State Treasurer, and no more bonds were indorsed by the latter.

An act was also passed at that time to exchange the second mortgage bonds, which I received as part payment on my contract, for State bonds. In other words, the State purchased the second mortgage bonds of the road at the rate of 50 cents on the dollar, in exchange at par. This act of the Legislature was between the State and the contractors, and not the Company. The State now holds these second mortgage bonds for the distance of completed road. Mr. Kimball got the benefit of the money I had to pay for the second mortgage.

I wish this to be distinctly understood, that Mr. Clews had no interest in my contract nor in the obtaining of it, and I know that he had some with the parties who succeeded me, as Mr. Kimball complained to me that Mr. Clews would not make the advances which he had asked, wished and needed. I am a Democrat and a strong one, but I cannot bear to see a man whom I know as thoroughly as Mr. Clews to be an honest man assailed through partisan malice. I feel it just to Mr. Clews to add, from my personal experience of the cautious manner in which he conducts his business, and from my knowledge of all these Georgia affairs, about bonds that I know the charges in the TRIBUNE and made by Georgia politicians and papers about his connection with such irregularities, are utterly untrue and without foundation, and regret to see political use made of such groundless calumnies."

The substance of this statement was in my affidavit to the Georgia Bond Committee, which affidavit the said committee omitted in their report to the Georgia Legislature, I suppose because it was favorable to Mr. Clews. Much of the affidavit of Mr. Chas. S. Frost, the President of the Brunswick and Albany Railroad, was also left out of their report.

Collision on the Central Railroad—An Oil Train Wholly Destroyed.

From the Schenectady Star, Sept. 9.

A terrific collision occurred yesterday morning, between 3 and 4 o'clock, between a freight-train and an oil-train, on the New-York Central Railroad, about three miles west of this city, resulting in the total destruction by fire, of the locomotive, No. 271, six cars loaded with oil, two cars of freight and two caboose cars, together with all their contents, beside considerable damage to the track.

Several cars of a freight-train coming East had become detached by the breaking of a coupling. The train was stopped as soon as the accident was discovered, and backed up to make the connection. In the meantime a brakeman was sent back to warn the following train, but the morning was so very foggy that the engineer of locomotive No. 271, which was drawing a train of oil-cars, and following in the wake of the broken train, did not observe his signals and ran by him. The oil-train was running at a rapid speed, and, owing to the prevailing fog, the engineer, Mr. William Teller, of this city, did not see the preceding train until within a short distance. Seeing that a collision was inevitable, Mr. Teller immediately reversed his engine, and he and the fireman jumped for their lives.

The next instant the locomotive plowed into the rear of the train with a terrible crash. So great was the force of the collision that the locomotive was lifted completely off the rails, and fell across the two tracks, the tender lying directly in the rear of the foot-board of the engine, in the ditch, south of the track. Four cars, two cabooses and two cars of the freight-train were demolished by the collision. The fire of the furnace of the locomotive communicated with the oil-cars, which were immediately in flames. Fed by the oil from the barrels on the oil-train the fire burned and spread rapidly and furiously.

A train following the oil-train soon came up and was stopped only in time to prevent another collision. By this time six of the oil-cars were in flames, and had not the remaining cars been pulled back out of the way by the locomotive of this train, the whole of the oil-train, numbering about twenty cars, would have been consumed. One of the saved the freight-train was loaded with flour.

The fire raged furiously and spread rapidly, and soon every particle of combustible material, about the locomotive and the ten cars was destroyed, leaving nothing but the iron work. The rails were warped and twisted for a considerable distance, so intense was the heat, while the telegraph poles, fences, grass, stumps, bushes, &c., alongside the road, were burned for a considerable distance from the track.

Mr. Teller, the engineer, was, we learn, quite seriously injured by his leap from his engine, falling and striking his breast upon a tie. He also narrowly escaped being enveloped in the sea of burning oil which covered the track for a considerable distance. A conductor on the freight-train also narrowly escaped. He was, we believe, coming down on the train "dead-head," and was asleep in his caboose when the collision occurred. He received some severe injuries about the head. His watch and some other personal property was consumed in the flames.

A Rebellion of Coachmen—Significance of the Movement—Active Measures of Cebaliles—The Havana Clerks—The Porto Rico Elections—General Gossip.

From Our Own Correspondent.

HAVANA, Saturday, Sept. 7, 1872.

When Napoleon said of the Spaniards, "They never learn anything and they never forget anything," he undoubtedly pronounced a very good judgment for the time, but even the Spaniards begin to avail with the advance of the age; they have not yet learned how to walk. Last Sunday we had a strong proof of this in the ridiculous finale of the heroes who inaugurated the movement against Dulce, (then aided by respectable people,) who revenged Castañon's death by killing innocent people in the street, cowed all Havana, and managed to obtain a gratis exhibition in having eight students executed. On Sunday last the coachmen, of whom seven-tenths are Spaniards, and the Volunteers, resolved to show the Government that laws were not made for them, that the day of obedience had passed, and that the mob should reign and govern. Of late most of the three thousand coachmen had become mutinied to such a degree as to cause universal disgust; the people complained and the coachmen laughed, violating every city ordinance. Couples, on taking possession, would after dark, then in the middle of a block, some confederates of the coachman would come to each side, and, with the point of a dagger between the passenger's ribs, would politely ask him for his money. The Governor then republished the orders hitherto in force, and the coachmen took offense at this. They counted on the assistance of the draymen, and three thousand armed men, with an assisting mob of ten thousand unarmed men, is not to be despised. This is the force they depended upon. Three Gallegos and one Austrian were reported to be the leaders of the movement; the Canary Islanders, as more civilized and tractable, seemed to take any prominent part. Over one thousand coachmen had put up their carriages, and in groups of about twenty-five, armed with bludgeons, knives and pistols, had taken possession of the entrances of the principal streets and compelled every coachman to return to his stable. At 8 o'clock in the morning the riot began to assume more formidable proportions, the bottle having made its appearance. A drunken Spaniard is a sad case, indeed; as long as the Spaniard remains sober he can be reasoned with, but once under the influence of liquor he becomes ferocious. Cholera and war have made the Spaniards take to gin and the Cubans to brandy; the former total abstinence of both has become a thing of the past. The rebellious coachmen made free use of their cudgels on each of their calling as refused to take their coaches home at once and join them. Everywhere people began to close doors and windows; and countenances which are never seen during daytime made their appearance on the streets. Ignorant people supposed that the coachmen were on a strike, hearing the word mentioned, while the movement was simply the first trial of strength between the lower and the better class of Spaniards. Gen. Ceballos heard of the matter, in fact the rioters were within a few yards of his Summer residence; and accompanied by a few police officers, he came along the paseo to Havana. As the head of the paseo he met a group of coachmen and others, and he stopped his carriage. "What are you doing here?" asked the General, and the answer was, "Go to ——, you ——!" Hardly were the words out of the fellow's mouth when Ceballos was out of the carriage, and with the fellow by the throat was giving him blow after blow with a heavy cane. "Cut them down," Ceballos shouted to the police officers with him, "unless they throw their sticks away at once." In less than a minute Ceballos and four policemen had disarmed over forty armed rowdies; a little further ahead some coachmen were beating a Canary Islander who refused to join them, until his head was like a jelly. Ceballos ran toward them, accompanied by two men, and the coachmen fled in dismay. Similar scenes were repeated everywhere, the example of the Captain-General having given the people and Volunteers the cue how to act, if Ceballos had not been so determined at the outset, the coachmen would have had control of the city before 12 o'clock, as the mob has hitherto always gained the day. Of all the contemptible and cowardly mobs, that of the coachmen on Sunday was the most disgusting. The attempt of the mob to have a regular holiday failed, however, as the Spaniards here have scent the danger of allowing the lower classes to have all the power they want. The police for once acted almost like policemen, ought to act, and officers of Volunteers arrested rioters who wore Volunteer uniforms. In front of the Captain-General's palace, Capt. José Echanis, of the Volunteers, arrested a Gallego, who wore a Volunteer uniform and who was making an incendiary speech to a lot of coachmen. Echanis waited until the man was separated from the rest, and grabbed him, dragging him over to the barracks, where the man confessed that he was not a Volunteer; that he had just come out of the penitentiary, and that his first cousin was the editor of a prominent low journal, published somewhere in the interests of the Spanish party. The Captain-General re-enforced all the guard stations, requesting the Admiral to have his forces ready in case of emergency; and he ordered the Commanders of the Cabañas, Principe and Morro forts to bring their guns to bear on the city. During the afternoon a commission of drayment called on Gen. Ceballos, and as some of their complaints appeared reasonable, he promised to look into them. The remarks of the Diario and Constancia in relation to this incipient war of Spaniards against Spaniards, and Spaniards against the law, are such as were to be expected. Both journals throw out hints that the row was caused by machinations of the Cuban laboratories, when simon-pure Spanish laboratories were the movers of the whole. On Monday morning nearly all the coaches for hire were again at work, and the trial of the nine ringleaders in now going on.

THE HAVANA CLERKS.

A different movement to that of the coachmen, and one inaugurated with more reason, and without attempting the use of force, is that of the white slaves, the Havana clerks. I caught to my Spanish slaves, as the blacks are in many respects better off than these poor, ill-treated and over-worked men. A clerk in a Havana dry-goods or other establishment begins his labors at 6 A. M. by cleaning up the shelves, the junior clerks, or boys, sweeping the floors. Good meals are furnished by the employers, all clerks eating and sleeping in the establishment where they are employed; at 10 to 11 P. M. the establishment is closed, and the clerk's labor is over for that day, it having lasted from fifteen to seventeen hours. Not a single public library exists in Havana, and, excepting one or two small societies, nothing exists to afford innocent or instructive pastime to the young men. The small spot called a park and numerous bar-rooms are the only places where they can go, and this only once every fortnight—after noon on Sundays. The poor clerks want this state of affairs changed, and as many are members of the Casino, they called for an assemblage of clerks to discuss the matter at the saloons of that institution. But as poor Spaniards have no rights which a wealthy slave-owner is bound to pay much attention to, the Casino published a counter advertisement immediately, and denounced Mr. Juan Ortiz for having published the advertisement contrary to the regulations of the Casino. And here the Casino made a great mistake; the mercantile clerks would never have made common cause with the coachmen and cartmen; today all are one in ideas and aspirations. The movement of the clerks is not a strike strictly speaking; it is a demand to be treated like human beings, to be accorded sufficient time to attend to religious and social duties, to be given an opportunity to practice the religion taught him by his fathers instead of becoming an atheist, like nine-tenths of the people of this country, and to be allowed to mingle with respectable families instead of going in the company of loud women and low men.

PORTO RICO ELECTIONS.

The Porto Rico elections have given the Spaniards in Cuba a great deal to think of. The abolition element is growing, and the results of the last elections have placed the Porto Rico Spaniards in open conflict with the Captain-Generals. The secession element is in the ascendant, though it has always been composed of a majority of inhabitants. Of the fourteen Deputies elected seven are downright secessionists, but the Porto Ricans are much smarter than the Cubans, they do not fight the Spaniards, but say yes to everything the Spanish Government says, and march in accord with the Liberal party and Republicans in old Spain, obtain the rights to which at present they are entitled to as citizens or subjects of the Spanish monarchy. Unless matters are handled very delicately in Porto Rico, an outbreak is imminent between the ultra Spanish and the Liberal parties, but the latter will unite with the fist of Spain, shouting, "Hurrah for Spain, its King and Constitution, and down with slavery," and this battle cry will insure them success, as they will not pretend to fight against Spain and its authorities, but will stand beside the Captain-General against the European Spaniards whom they will treat as rebels to Spain.

MISCELLANEOUS GOSSIP.

The yellow fever continues to make numerous victims. The French Bark Jacques Cartier left here with three hundred Chinamen arrived. Here with two hundred and thirty-five, sixty-five having died during the passage, and several having been killed in a mutiny.... Mr. Y. Pancorbo, late Secretary of Hacienda, has been appointed Minister of the Havana Railroad, and Lieut.-Col. Abeno Bolaun elected to fill the vacancy.... The number of potheries and zenaides has not decreased much, and the activity of the police in arresting vagabonds is already on the wane. QUASIMODO.

A Singular Occurrence.

From the Newport (R. I.) News Sept. 13.

A New-York lady visiting in Providence the past two weeks was strongly impressed that she ought to go home, and made arrangements to go last Friday night, but was prevailed on to stay over Sunday so as to have a relative's company. On Sunday morning about 4 o'clock she awoke, and saw her sister that she had left in New-York standing in her room, and got up to meet her when the vision vanished. She returned to her bed, fell asleep and was again awakened with the recurring vision, and by noon received word that her sister whom she had left at home well, and of whose illness she had not heard, had died at that very hour.

THE NEW-YORK TIMES.

The increase in the circulation of the NEW-YORK TIMES, in less than three months, has been 15,200 on the daily, and 70,900 on the weekly paper. Advertisers will find in these papers the best possible means of communicating with the most respectable classes in the community.

The scurvy crowd which was enticed, on Thursday evening, to listen to CHARLES A. DANA, FERNANDO WOD, KILPATRICK, FELLOWS, and VANDERBILT'S CHAUNCEY, required some respectable names to make them pass muster, and a few such names have been boldly appropriated by the Tammany-Greeley managers. Their lists of Vice-Presidents are frauds, like all the rest of their stock in trade. We have no doubt that FRANK LESLIE, MUDGETT, ERASTUS BROOKS, MARK LANIGAN, and men of that kind, consented to have their names used, but there are others on the list which were unquestionably stolen. For instance, we find "SIDNEY WEBSTER" entered. Now, Mr. SIDNEY WEBSTER has been in Europe all the Summer, and is now somewhere in mid-Atlantic, so that it is quite impossible he could have sanctioned this use of his name. Again, we very much doubt whether Mr. ROYAL PHELPS gave authority for his name to be placarded at this rowdy collection of Tammanyites. Mr. A. T. STEWART also appears as Vice-President. The City Judge is on the list, although it might be thought that our Judges could find something better to do than to associate with Tammany rogues. Perhaps, however, we shall be told that Judge REDFORD depends upon Tammany influence for his re-election. TWOMBLY, who sold out the reform cause in the last Legislature, now appears very properly as a Tammanyite. And perhaps MARSHALL O. ROBERTS could do no less than support Tammany after he signed that certificate, deposing that CONNOLLY'S accounts were all in apple-pie order, and that TWEED & Co. were the very patterns of honesty. Are not these men pretty "Reformers?"

Readers of the Greeleyite organs must have observed the bitter scorn with which "office-holders" are always spoken of in them. Would there, then, be no office-holders if GREELEY were elected? Would the great Sage conduct the whole public business of the country himself? This violent abuse of "office-holders" is as hypocritical as it is silly. The cute denounce the ins, merely because they want to get in themselves. GREELEY'S gang—WOOD, BROOKS, DANA, FELLOWS, BRENNAN & Co.—merely support GREELEY because they want to secure office. Is it so very much worse to be an office-holder than an office-seeker?

"But all the office-holders in the United States could not put the TIMES into the position occupied by the Tribune."—New-York Tribune.

Very true, Professor—and we should be sorry if they could, for whereas we have extended the circulation of our daily paper nearly 15,000 in three months, and the weekly over 70,000, the Tribune has been constantly, steadily, and hopelessly declining. Therefore we do not want either office-holders or office-seekers to put us into the "position occupied by the Tribune." Again, says the Professor: "A great journal is not made by patronage; it makes itself; it can only be destroyed by itself." The truth of the latter part of this doctrine is being very conclusively proved by GREELEY'S successor. He is managing to destroy GREELEY'S paper, and he will also succeed in destroying GREELEY himself.

It is the fashion among the professional Reformers nowadays to snear at the reduction of the debt under President GRANT, and to ask if it was not the people who paid it. It unquestionably was the people who paid the taxes, but it was under Gen. GRANT'S wise and firm administration that those taxes were so impartially collected and so honestly applied that, with a reduction of taxation equal to $250,000,000, $300,000,000 of the debt was paid in three years.

There is one little mistake made by the Greeleyites which they may as well correct. It is that when they have hatched a new slander, it is the bounden duty of the Administration to reply to it. The burden of proof, they fancy, is on the accused, not the the accuser. Thus, having had all their other fabrications knocked on the head, they have concocted some stupid falsehood about Credit Mobilier shares, and Oakes Ames, or Ames Oakes, or something of that kind—and call upon the persons concerned to answer. We earnestly hope the said persons will do nothing of the kind. The charge appeared originally in the Sun, which is prima facie evidence that it is a lie. No man is bound to answer attacks upon his character which proceed from DANA—for whose character has he not attacked? One of his latest exploits has been to assert most solemnly that the late Mr. STANTON made a certain statement to him—when it is perfectly clear from Mr. STANTON'S own letter that he never could have used the words put into his mouth, after death, by DANA. In short, DANA is convicted by STANTON himself of having forged a statement in STANTON'S name. Look at the evidence in another column, and see whether you can put any other construction upon the affair. Now when this man DANA concocts a fresh falsehood, is anybody bound to answer it? As for his fellow-slanderer at the Tribune office, before he introduces any fresh commodities upon the market, let him put down his ten thousand dollars for our Children's Fund, about the Galena lead business, and we will forthwith convict him once more of being an unscrupulous libeler.

A "phenomenal majority" is promised for GREELEY in this State by his organ. Exactly what a "phenomenal majority" is, is a mystery to one who does not possess a copy of the Professor's private dictionary. But if any one is flattering himself that it is possible for Tammany to supply from this City any majority, "phenomenal" or otherwise, its candidates may require, as it used formerly to do, he will find himself cruelly mistaken.

Our victory in Maine grows better and better the more closely it is looked at. Our correspondent this morning points out very clearly some of its distinguishing features, especially that the Republican majority is relatively equal to 1868, and that it is a very great advance on the three preceding years. Another and most important fact is that Republicans have gained, most where their opponents claimed to be the strongest, namely, in HALE'S and BLAINE'S districts, where the most active struggle took place. Perhaps the mongrel coalition party will find out after a while that the more the country is awakened to the differences between the two parties, the more thoroughly it is Republican.

Pennsylvania in October.

Closely occupied with the exciting contests in Vermont and Maine, we have not hitherto been able to pay that attention to the political situation in Pennsylvania which its intrinsic importance now requires. But since the results of the elections in the States named are secured, and are all the most ardent Republicans could desire, Pennsylvania will naturally occupy a large share of attention.

In some respects, Pennsylvania is peculiarly situated. There are Republicans there who are heartily in favor of the re-election of Gen. GRANT, but who are prejudiced against the State ticket, and particularly against Gen. HARTRANFT. We are not altogether unprepared for these local alienations. They are common to nearly all State contests. They appeared in a different form in Maine. They have been frequent in our own State. In the case of Pennsylvania, they grow out of jealousies and differences that have been known and regretted by Republicans in other States for years. We believe they can and will be prevented from disturbing essentially the harmony of the party, so essential to the success of the principles we all have at heart, even in the approaching October election. So far as they have given rise to reflections on the personal and official character of Gen. HARTRANFT, we propose in a few days to give the results of a careful investigation into the facts. In the meantime, we have to say that, according to the best information in our possession, the attacks on Gen. HARTRANFT'S reputation are unwarrantable, and grow out of feelings that, however powerful they may be with individuals, ought not to influence the action of Republicans at large. It is not denied that Gen. HARTRANFT enjoys the esteem and warm regard of those who are situated so as to know him most closely. He was a gallant and faithful soldier, and as an official we are sorry to have to believe that much of the bitter antagonism exhibited toward him grows out of the fidelity and conscientiousness with which he has discharged his official duties. Concerning these matters, as we have already said, we propose in a few days to give our readers a candid and thorough explanation.

Meantime, we have a word to say to those who, being unfriendly to Gen. HARTRANFT, still assert that they can carry the State for GRANT in November, in spite of a defeat in October, and that they are willing to try the experiment. In our judgment the experiment is a hazardous one, only to be justified to those who undertake it by the most unanswerable arguments. We do not, for a moment, believe that the election of BUCKALEW in October is necessarily to be followed by the election of GREELEY, whom BUCKALEW at once despises in private and ignores in public. We do not think that it is in the power of the disaffected in any one State to prevent the realization of the earnest desire of the great body of the people of all the States that Gen. GRANT shall be re-elected.

But a victory for the Greeley coalition in Pennsylvania in October would needlessly and unwisely increase the labor of a victory for GRANT in the same State and in the Union in November. If any one doubts this, let him consult the tone of the Greeley organs. From that he will see how eagerly such a crumb of comfort would be snatched at, and how ingeniously and persistently it would be manipulated to mislead public sentiment. Pennsylvania's vast business interests would feel in an instant the shock given to the confidence of the country, in the continuance of the present moderate, safe, and stable public policy. Even a hint that the country might be surrendered to the crazy vagaries of GREELEY, and the corrupt devices of his horde of Tammany guides and counselors, would be of incalculable injury to the business interests of all classes. It would introduce suddenly into the calculations of the future an element of uncertainty, the influence of which it would be nearly impossible to counteract. Such a hint would be supplied by a victory for BUCKALEW in Pennsylvania in October, and no State would feel the consequence inevitably flowing from it more severely and heavily than Pennsylvania itself. These are facts which every Republican in the State will carefully consider in determining his duty in the now rapidly-approaching election, and we have no doubt that Pennsylvania will not disappoint the confident expectation by the country of a victory as decided as those of North Carolina and Maine, and even more conclusive.

The Children's Fund.

We present, this morning, a comprehensive statement of the money subscribed, the money expended, and the work done in connection with the Children's Relief Fund. The accounts are closed, and the work is at an end for the season. From first to last, the progress of this enterprise has been most encouraging to us, and the substantial and enduring benefits which have resulted from it, must amply repay our subscribers for the money which was so generously contributed. Not the least gratifying feature of the work has been the entire spontaneity with which the Fund was created. An appeal which derived its earnestness from the fact that we had personally satisfied ourselves by actual observation of the pressing need of help for dying children in the poverty-stricken homes of the City, elicited a response which proves how many good people there are in the world ready to assist really deserving cases of distress. We felt the responsibility of the work, whose management was pressed upon us by the early subscribers to the Fund; and we entered upon it with no common degree of anxiety and solicitude. Though entailing upon us, during a season of absorbing work of another kind, no little trouble and expense, the organization and the carrying out of the details of excursions and sick relief service have been to us emphatically a labor of love. We have had our reward in the approval of all our readers, in unstinted praise from quarters where we usually look for censure, and in the unexampled freedom from accident which has marked every detail of an enterprise which we have now brought to a termination so satisfactory to all concerned. We have had our reward, moreover, in the imitation to which other communities have been stirred by the example of the charitable munificence of our subscribers.

The practical results which we have to submit to the subscribers of the Fund in return for their money are briefly these: The total amount of money received amounted to $19,296 75, of which the sum of $15,818 01 has been expended for excursions and the relief of sick children, or their parents, thus leaving a cash balance in hand of $3,478 74. During nine weeks of the hot season, eighteen excursions were given for children and mothers having infants or very young children under their care. The number of boys and girls who enjoyed a holiday on these picnics was 18,673, beside 1,723 adults, (teachers or mothers.) The total expense of the excursions was $10,634 97, making the cost for each individual about fifty-two cents. The food and refreshments supplied on these excursions were unstinted in quantity and of quite unusual variety and excellence. Railroad trains, steam-boats, tugs and barges had to be chartered, and a corps of waiters organized to properly carry out the details. Bands of music and the appliances necessary for a variety of amusements for the children were also provided, so that the cost has been remarkably low. This was largely due to the liberality of those from whom the supplies and transportation were procured, many of whom must properly be ranked as generous subscribers to the Fund.

In the relief movement some very interesting details are found. There were 178 visitors engaged in the work, under the control of four superintendents of districts. They made visits to 63,453 families, and found 2,067 needing relief, the number of individuals being 8,624. There were 1,775 medical visits paid for, and 449 made gratuitously. The number of patients attended was 1,669. Food, clothing, luxuries for the sick, fans and ice were freely given where needed, the total amount expended in this branch of the Fund being $5,185 04, or an average cost of a little over $3 per patient.

We have thus the satisfaction of being able to prove that both branches of the work have been cheaply and satisfactorily done. In both, and in that of sick relief specially, we have to acknowledge our weighty obligations to the co-operation of many Christian men and women who have given, without stint and without reward, their time and energies to the task. When we say that much has been done through the instrumentality of this Fund to arrest the progress of infantile disease, and to save many lives among the poor children of the City, we have but half expressed the good results which have sprung from it. It has helped to develop a kindlier feeling between classes—surely a much-needed result in these days—it afforded the givers of the money a fresh proof of the good that may be accomplished by wisely directed charity, and it has given to thousands of our poorer fellow-citizens a practical proof that the sufferings of their children can move the hearts of people whom they never saw.

After the most liberal administration of the Children's Fund, it is very gratifying to be able to carry over a balance to next season, which affords a guarantee of the renewal of the work as soon as the necessity for it arises. The money remaining unexpended amounts to $3,478 74. There should, strictly speaking, be added to this the interest which has already accrued upon the money deposited as received. This will, of course, go to increase the sum with which the account of another season can be opened. We have invited the following gentlemen to take charge of this money and invest it to the best possible advantage: EDWARD KING, Esq., President New-York Stock Exchange; CHARLES H. MARSHALL, Esq., Merchant, Burling-slip, and GEORGE JONES, Esq., NEW-YORK TIMES. When it becomes necessary to renew the enterprise these gentlemen will, we trust, be prepared to give some practical advice as to the best method of carrying it on. In the meanwhile, we can only thank our readers, in behalf of the poor children who cannot speak for themselves, for the generosity which they have displayed; and we can heartily assure them that there never was a charitable fund more economically or faithfully distributed. Much suffering has been alleviated—many lives have been saved. We may not carry on the work another year, but into whatever hands it may fall we hope it will receive the same noble encouragement which has been bestowed upon it during the past trying season.

Tammany in the Streets.

The Liberal-Democratic fraud having been crushed in North Carolina, and further mangled in Maine, its friends have attempted to galvanize its corpse into the semblance of vitality by holding a mass-meeting in this City. The meeting was appropriately held in and near Tammany Hall, and the old managers of the "Ring" furnished their ragged cohorts with the old transparencies—the name of GREELEY being substituted for that of the "Boss,"—and summoned them forth by the call of the cannon and the glare of fire-works. "Never, even under the old Ring management"—chuckles the Tribune—"were the decorations of the halls and stands, the music, the fire-works, and all the various accessories which attract and entertain crowds more liberally and judiciously furnished." And yet the meeting was a small one in comparison with those which TWEED was wont to engineer. The meaning of which fact undoubtedly is, that without access to the City Treasury, Tammany cannot command the absolute obedience of its mercenary followers.

However, the twin Democratic organs, the Tribune and the World, profess to be well satisfied with the meeting, and each celebrates it in what it conceives to be fine writing. The Tribune asserts that the mob was "as homogeneous as the waves of the sea," which is not a very intelligible phrase, but is perhaps a more truthful one than the assertion that it was as clean as the waves of the sea would have been. This "vast communion of the men of peace"—including the roughs and shoulder-hitters of the Sixth and Fourth Wards—was, in the Tribune's opinion, an evidence that "the great commercial Metropolis of the Western World has declared unmistakably its majestic will." So eminent a banker as Mr. HENRY CLEWS was not capable, in the opinion of FENTON'S Professor, of knowing anything about public opinion among business men. It is to the "John Fagan Association," the "Black Rock Social Club," the "Owen Gounley Association," and other bodies of equally prominent business men, that the Professor turns when he desires to know the majestic will of the great commercial Metropolis. These representatives of commerce "swore good-naturedly"—which was, perhaps, due to their admiration of the habits of their candidate—and shouted with considerable strength of lungs. Whence, says the Tribune, we are to conclude that there will be "an exemplary majority in this Imperial City in favor of justice and reform."

Now, who were the leaders at this meeting of the friends of "justice and reform." The Tribune remarks that over the great loyal meeting of 1861 "the warrior effigy of WASHINGTON appropriately presided," and then informs us that over the meeting of Thursday night CHARLES A. DANA, of the Sun, presided; his eminent rival in liberal journalism, Mr. FRANK LESLIE, of the Day's Doings, being one of the Vice-Presidents. So it seems from the meeting of 1861 to that of 1872, the descent is as great as that from WASHINGTON to DANA. Among the Vice-Presidents of this reform meeting we find the names of those pure and patriotic reformers, MAT. BRENNAN, JOHN MORRISSEY, MAGNUS GROSS, GIDEON J. TUCKER, BENJAMIN WOOD, SAMUEL JONES, NICHOLAS MULLER, and nearly all the old names with which we were familiar in the days when Tammany was at the height of its power. Mr. ALGERNON S. SULLIVAN, TWEED'S Assistant District-Attorney, opened the meeting with a speech in which he promised "free speech, free Press, free ballots, free Judiciary," in the event of GREELEY'S election. We all know what Mr. SULLIVAN and his friends thought of "free speech and free Press" when they drafted and pushed through TWEED'S Legislature, the infamous Code amendments, punishing with fine and imprisonment every editor who should criticise the Ring. "Free ballots" in their opinion are synonymous with stuffed ballot-boxes, and the "free Judiciary" which best pleases them, is represented by BARNARD and CARDOZO. Mr. DANA announced that "the heart"—Mr. DANA'S susceptible heart—"becomes sick and patriotism discouraged at the spectacle" of the alleged offenses of the Administration. It is sad to find that a man who makes slander a profession, and who, the Tribune admitted, had suppressed an entire edition of his paper on the payment of a sum of money by FISK, should thus become heart-sick. Doubtless, if Mr. FRANK LESLIE had spoken, he, too, would have confessed himself heart-sick over the sale of such obscene publications as are not issued from his office.

Following SULLIVAN and DANA, came, among lesser lights of reform, Mr. FERNANDO WOOD, who thought that his "tenacious adherence to the principles and usages of his party" should give his opinion peculiar weight. Were the crimes which marked WOOD'S private and political life in the days when he had any political influence the "principles," or merely the "usages," of his party? Gen. SPINOLA subsequently denounced "gift-taking," but, curiously enough, said nothing about bribery. Mr. DEPEW found fault with the President for not earning his own living, and evidently thought that lobbying is more honorable than the duties of the Presidency. Col. FELLOWS and Gen. KILPATRICK were also among the speakers, while the one decent man among them all, Ex-Confederate Secretary of State HUNTER, was so confused by the spectacle of such men as these advocating reform, that he committed the equal inconsistency of advocating GREELEY and denouncing protection.

This meeting had almost as remarkable an effect upon the World as it had upon Mr. HUNTER. That consistent organ began a double-leaded leader with the evident intention of glorifying the meeting, and asserted that the campaign had begun "in deadly earnest," and "with the thunder of the captains and the shouting in Union-square!"—which, if somewhat bombastic, is nevertheless true, since the "thunder of the captains"—meaning DANA, WOOD and KILPATRICK—was about all there was of the meeting. Before the World writer finished, he, however, seems to have forgotten which side he was advocating—a mistake quite excusable in him—and prophesied that the "signal" given by the meeting "will be as a fire-bell in the darkness." However, the World was not at all afraid of the signal or those who sounded it, and bravely cried: "The old enemy meets us, though under a new face. As before he shall be confronted; as before he shall be crushed." This is in substance what the Republican journals have been saying ever since the campaign opened, and it is plain that the World man must have thought that his paper was a Republican sheet.

After all this waste of eloquence by distinguished Reformers, and all this gushing on the part of the Tribune and bombastic rhetoric on the part of the World, it is amusing to reflect that the great Greeley meeting consisted of DANA, SULLIVAN, BRENNAN, LESLIE, FELLOWS and their kind, and about four thousand of the rank and file of Tammany.

"Disfranchisement and Disqualification."

It is possible that the constant repetition by the minor Greeley orators of the howl about "the disfranchised South," may persuade some unthinking persons that there really is such a thing as disfranchisement by Federal laws in this country. In reality there is not. The history of the case is very simple.

The original Reconstruction laws, under which Constitutional Conventions were elected in the rebel States, excluded certain classes of disloyal men from voting. When the Constitutional Conventions met in the several States, a Constitution was framed for each, some of which disfranchised rebels, as in Tennessee and Missouri, and the remainder of which did not. The disfranchising clauses in these Constitutions have since been repealed, and no man is now prevented from voting anywhere in the United States on account of having taken part in the rebellion.

A few are disqualified from holding office—less than two hundred in all. This came about as follows: The Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States prohibited certain classes from holding office, all of whom had taken an oath to support the Constitution of the United States and subsequently taken part in the rebellion. This included, necessarily, all Federal and State officers for years back, and was very sweeping. The same amendment, however, gave Congress the power to remove this disability by a two-thirds vote of each House. This Congress, on the urgent recommendation of Gen. GRANT, did, the 22d of May last, excepting from such release only the following classes of men, who had taken an oath to support the Constitution, and subsequently engaged in rebellion:

1. Senators and Representatives in the Thirty-sixth and Thirty-seventh Congresses.
2. Judicial, military and naval officers of the United States.
3. Heads of Departments.
4. Foreign Ministers.

A number of individuals of these classes were relieved from their disqualifications by a separate vote of Congress before its adjournment.

It is evident, therefore, that there is no disfranchisement and very little disqualification for office in the Southern States. Some score of men in each—JEFFERSON DAVIS and ROBERT TOOMBS, for instance—cannot be returned to the United States Senate, or to any other Federal or State office, but even they can vote for any elective officer. If the Greeleyites are fools enough to wish to see JEFF. DAVIS back in the Senate, the people are very far from agreeing with them.

The Butcher's Bill.

The wholesale butchers have increased their prices, and the complaint of the high price of food, and particularly of beef and mutton, still reaches us from England. Probably the former fact is dependent in a great measure upon the latter; for those who understand the market say that there is no special reason for an advance in butcher's meat at present. It would seem, then, that notwithstanding our plenteous harvest, and particularly the great yield of grass and hay, we are not likely to see any diminution in the cost of providing for our tables during the coming season. The matter is a grave one; and one which, if it does not "come home to men's business and bosoms," does come very directly home to their pockets. The cost in money of feeding a family is nearly twice as great now as it was twelve or fifteen years ago; and it is a safe prediction that, in money, that cost will never be materially less. We say in money, because by a readjustment in all prices the actual cost might be brought to the old comparative standard; and such a readjustment must take place, unless the experience of mankind in past ages is to go for nothing. Money, even when it is made of the precious metals, and has an actual as well as a representative value, is only a standard of comparison. For example, the price of meat in England three hundred years ago was about twopence a pound; turnips and other like vegetables could be bought for a penny a bushel, and a man whose income was a hundred pounds a year might live handsomely and keep a carriage. But this does not mean that beef and mutton, and vegetables and oats were more plentiful, or really cheaper then than they are now, but merely that gold and silver were scarcer and dearer. An ordinary duodecimo book could be bought then for sixpence; you could go to the theatre for twopence or sixpence, and a fairsized brick-house and garden could be bought for twenty pounds. For the price of your book, your visit to the theatre, or your house then you could buy as much meat, nearly, then as you can now for the prices of the same articles.

It is undeniable that the steady increase of prices has been due mainly to the constant increase in the quantity of gold and silver, which are the materials of money in all civilized and semi-civilized nations. Another cause of the advance in the price of food has been the increase of the actual number of consumers; another, that owing to the development of manufactures and commerce, the increase in the number of the producers of food has not been in proportion to the increase of consumers. These causes are almost universally operative; but in this country there is another of very great importance, the introduction of paper currency which we have now used for ten years, and the derangement of agriculture consequent upon our long and dreadful war. These causes affected at first the whole community; but owing to a partial readjustment of monetary relations, two large classes are now in a great measure relieved from the oppressive consequences of the change. These are the actual producers, whether agriculturists or artisans, and the traders, those who are actually engaged in buying and selling. The increase in prices has proportionably increased the means of those two classes, and they are now suffering little, or not at all, from the difference in the cost of food and of house rent from the cost ten years ago. They have to pay more, but they have more wherewith to pay.

But there is a very large and a very important class to whom the present period of transition is one of severe trial. This class includes all those who live on salaries, fees, and incomes from invested property. The incomes of all such persons are in a measure fixed, and an increase in their means of living is the last that is effected. Even if their pay is increased, the change is made slowly and grudgingly, and in the case of incomes derived from interest, no increase at all has yet been made. Now this class, including as it does all professional men, clerks, accountants, salesmen, teachers and the like, is not only a very numerous one indeed, but it includes a very large proportion of the best intelligence and worth of the whole country. For this large class there appears to be no resource at present but a strict economy, which in most cases must mean a rigid and sometimes a painful reduction of expenses.

With regard to the item of expenditure which was the starting point of our article—meats—we are profuse and wasteful to a degree that excites the surprise of all those people who are better economists and better cooks than ourselves. In this respect there is, as we hope to show, room for a change which would greatly relieve the cares of house-holders of moderate means in more than one way. But this part of the subject is too important to be discussed at the end of an article; and we leave it with only this indication of the direction in which relief may be obtained—indeed, the only one in which it can be at present hoped for.

MINOR TOPICS.

Judge LEONARD has before him a question of considerable importance in its bearing upon the official acts of the members of the Tammany Ring. It is claimed on behalf of a firm of plumbers, who made a claim against the City of $6,600 for work which has been valued at three hundred dollars, that because the old Board of Supervisors' allowed the claim, it was therefore mandatory upon the new Board of Audit to sanction it, and upon Controller GREEN to pay it. This is pretty nearly identical with the only possible defense which can be set up on behalf of the quartet of plunderers who constituted the infamous "interim Board of Audit." To the lay mind such a theory of the functions of any auditing authority is simply monstrous, and we trust that Judge LEONARD'S decision will be such as to remove another local quibble out of the rather slow progress of our Municipal thinkers toward Ring sing.

The Tammany organs evince a laudable curiosity as to when the questions growing out of the war are to be regarded as settled. We can only answer that these questions cannot be regarded as settled so long as the unrepentant rebels are seeking power through the election of a theocratical economist like GREELEY, nor so long as such an attempt is encouraged by the unscrupulous Tammany corporations, who think, if it succeeded, they might get a chance at the Federal Treasury.

There is something highly absurd in the idea, but it is nevertheless true, that the old chateau of WILLIAM the Conqueror, on the Seine of Normandy, was put up at auction the other day, and, like Charles Surface's ancestors, knocked down to the highest bidder. Not only was the castle the home of WILLIAM, but it was subsequently the prison of another king—RICHARD Cœur de Lion. Surely, as reflections of their age, the opera bouffes that laugh at sociality and jeer at the illustrious figures and customs of the past, are not ill-timed. And yet it is the same age that sees extraordinary honors paid to the Elgin Marbles, and columns and fragments brought with religious care from the Temple of the Ephesian Diana. Perhaps WILLIAM'S house was not quite venerable enough, and if it could have been proved to be that of JULIUS CÆSAR, the elder conqueror, it would have received more respectful treatment.

An engineer of celebrity in Italy has just been arrested at Florence for trying to poison at the same time no fewer than eighteen people. Among the number are his father, his brother, his wife, and his children. He was in financial difficulties, and, by way of extricating himself, he resolved to kill all from whom he expected to inherit property, or whose death would give him its unremitted possession. Only by pure accident was his diabolical purpose found out—after he had prepared, and, indeed, perfected his plans—but before anyone was hurt. An epidemic of slaughter seems to be raging just now in Europe, frightful tales of crime against the person reaching us simultaneously from France, England, Austria, Italy, Spain, and Sicily. Possibly the intense heat of the season may have had more to do with the matter than at first thought seems probable.

For the benefit of those who are interested in the prize offered for a campaign song by "A New-Yorker on a Furlough," we would say that a decision has been rendered, and the amount, $500, paid over to the successful competitor. The unsuccessful compositions, with the accompanying envelopes, containing signatures, have been destroyed. The song will shortly be produced.

The two ruffians who so brutally assaulted Officer BERNARD TULLY have now met their deserts. KEHLER was some time ago sentenced to ten years in State Prison, and his companion, O'BRIEN, has been sent to Sing Sing for the same term. A few such vigorous sentences are greatly needed, to convince the New-York rough that "smashing" a policeman is not a sort of amusement that may be indulged in at very slight risk. Officer TULLY had the courage to incur the enmity of an East-side gang of roughs, and the brutal assault to which he was subjected by KEHLER and O'BRIEN was intended to put a full stop to his career. Fearless discharge of duty is not so common in the Police force that the community can afford to leave it without due protection and recognition.

It is evident that Mr. BARNUM has not confined the support of his friend GREELEY to the issuing of a first-class puff of the Tammany candidate. He has evidently reinforced the Tribune staff by a temporary loan of the services of one of his skillful advertisement writers. Evidence of the hand of such an artist will be found in the information given in regard to the movements of Gen. SCHURZ, for the benefit of those "Eastern readers who have admiringly followed the enthusiastic receptions evoked (sic) by the progress" of the distinguished applicant for office through Ohio and Indiana. Could the advent of the woolly horse have been announced in language more classic?

Sumner's Candidacy.

The Boston Advertiser closes an article on the Massachusetts Democratic nominations with the following: "If Mr. Sumner consents to do the work of the Democrats in Massachusetts, they may succeed in dragging him down; he cannot raise them up. His leverage was in the confidence of the Republicans of the Commonwealth, and that he has contemptuously thrown away. At home he will be the standard-bearer of all that is reactionary, repressive and demoralizing in our politics. In the Senate he will be the representative of Massachusetts no longer, but of the faction which has fought her most deeply-cherished convictions from the beginning of the present political epoch to this hour. By the usages of the Senate he will be shorn of the influence to which Massachusetts is entitled on that floor, and which her Senator had no right to deliberately put in peril. If his sense of duty requires him to accept the position of defiance in which his new friends have placed him, it is unquestionably his duty to resign his seat in the Senate. While he remains, Massachusetts will have no voice there."

Civil Service Reform in Theory and Practice.

Two Inveterate Office-Seekers Reform, a la Greeley.

List of Appointments Sought by the Apostles.

We publish below very striking testimony to show how sudden and how recent was the conversion of Senators Schurz and Trumbull to the immutable principles of civil service reform. According to that system, no person in office is to be removed except for the reason that he is incompetent, and in case of vacancies, those in lower grades are to be promoted, while new appointments are to be made solely upon merit, which is to be ascertained by personal examination, and not from recommendations. And yet the lists which we publish show that these two pure-minded Senators have recommended to the corrupt Administration of Gen. Grant enough appointments to fill nearly the entire consular and diplomatic service, to say nothing of those urged for territorial governors, postmasters, internal revenue officers, and clerks. They ignore the sound system of promotion as a reward for faithful service in subordinate position, and demand the appointment of their friends at once to the highest grades. They pay no attention to the fact that there are no vacancies save when they express the opinion that an incumbent should be removed who is guilty of the atrocious crime of not agreeing with them in political sentiments.

We do not say that at the time Messrs. Schurz and Trumbull made these recommendations there was necessarily anything wrong in their so doing. We refer to it for no such reason, but we do refer to it to show the utter cant and hypocrisy which characterise the present course of these gentlemen. The best that can be said for them is that they have very recently—and we might add very suspiciously—had their eyes opened to the evil of their ways and have reformed. But at the same time they not only refuse to admit that there could be any possible excuse for the old system, but they loudly insist that nobody except themselves has reformed; that they are the only simon-pure Reformers, and all others are pretenders and hypocrites.

Of this pair of pattern Reformers, it appears that Schurz desired his friends to have nineteen Consulships, eight Missions, two Governorships of Territories, two Marshalships, one District Attorneyship, four Indian Agencies, two Surveyor-Generals' offices, one Register, one Pension Agency, one Chaplaincy, twenty-seven Clerkships, twenty Postmasterships, three Revenue Collectorships and two Assessorships, and one Surveyorship of St. Louis; but only one of his friends was sufficiently humble to be a laborer. One of Schurz's Governors was "Jim" Ashley, while some of his other friends are well known to fame or infamy, one of his clerks having been removed for stealing, which, in Senator Schurz's eyes was, we presume, a less crime than that of being a Democrat; for his ground for asking for the removal of one Collector was that he was a member of that party. In all, Mr. Schurz wanted places for 104 friends, and he got his full share.

Mr. Trumbull wanted places for nineteen Consuls, a Consul-General, two Commercial Agents, including that in San Domingo, twenty-nine for Trustees and four Postal Agents, two Judges, two Marshals, two District-Attorneys, three Indian Agents, two Pension Agents, one Surveyor-General, three Superintendents of Indian Affairs, one Librarian, six Clerks, one Governor, one Claim Agent, seven Assessors, five Collectors and two Supervisors of Internal Revenue, while for one of his friends all that he begged was some office, no matter what. Mr. Trumbull put himself in writing as to ninety-seven friends, including a brother-in-law. His son he did not trust to paper. He went and made personal threats to the President as to him.

The following are the lists:

THE BALTIMORE FAILURES.

Liabilities Estimated from Two to Three Millions—Resumption Probable by All the Firms.

BALTIMORE, Md., Sept. 13.—Alluding to the heavy failures in this city yesterday, the Baltimore Sun, in its financial article this morning, says the whole amount involved in these suspensions, it is understood, will probably reach $2,000,000, but the houses all claim to have assets ample to discharge the indebtedness if they are realized.

The American says the amount of liabilities is estimated at nearly $2,000,000, but it is impossible to speak with certainty as to this, or of the ultimate result of the disaster, although it is generally believed that the suspension will be only temporary, and that the majority if not all of these houses will speedily resume business.

The Gazette says: "No such disaster as the failures above noticed has befallen Baltimore for a long series of years, and the day deserves to be ranked in the history of commercial events here with the famous 'Black Friday' in New-York."

The following are the houses above alluded to whose failures are announced: Lozear Brothers, wholesale grocers, of Exchange-place, who went to protest on Wednesday, and whose suspension was followed, yesterday, by that of the old firm of Kirkland, Chase & Co., heavy importers, engaged in the West India and Brazil trade. J. C. Bridges & Co., and William Boyne & Co., wholesale grocers, on Commerce-street, and A. A. Perry & Co., wholesale lumber merchants, extensively engaged manufacturing staves and shooks for the West India trade, and several other failures are reported today.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Opening of an Active Campaign—Republican Confidence.

Personal Attacks on Gen. Hartranft—His Assailants and His Defenders—The Copperhead Bucktaiw in a Tight Place—The State Sure for Grant.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PHILADELPHIA, Friday, Sept. 13, 1872.

The Republicans of Pennsylvania are about to open the campaign in good earnest. The State Committee has made arrangements for a series of mass-meetings to be held in every section of the State between now and the State election on the 8th of October, and among the speakers engaged are such men as Henry Wilson, Gen. Burnside, Gen. Logan, Gen. Scofield, Gov. Hawley, Gov. Woodford, Gov. Harriman, Gov. Pollock, Gov. Fairchild, Gov. Noyes, Hon. A. H. Cragin, Hon. Miles S. Humphrey, Hon. B. H. Brewster, Hon. S. B. Axtell, of California, and twenty or thirty more of the ablest stump speakers in the country. The Soldiers' Convention, to be held in Pittsburg next week, will inaugurate a whirlwind that will roll back this "blind wave," and sweep all vestiges of the nauseous compound of Greeleyism and Democracy known as "Liberal" Republicanism from the State. To say that the Republicans of Pennsylvania are hopeful, but poorly expresses their feelings. They have that full confidence which amounts to absolute certainty of the success of their State ticket. I was talking today with a gentleman whose business has brought him in contact, during the last six weeks, with the leading men in forty-six counties of the western part of the State, comprising both Democrats and Republicans, and he says they all tell the same story—the defection from the Republican ranks is confined almost entirely to a few scoreheads, and is more than counterbalanced by the disgust of Democrats at the disgraceful coalition into which their party has been forced by the trading politicians. For every Republican who will vote for Greeley he is confident there will be two Democrats who will vote for Grant. The same is true in this city where the Republicans are confidently reckoning on fifteen thousand majority for the State ticket. To persons living outside of the State this perfect assurance of victory on the part of the Pennsylvania Republicans is a matter of surprise and would be also a matter of regret were it accomplished by any lack of effort on their part to achieve the success of which they feel so certain. But it is not. Everything will be done to make the victory as overwhelming and decisive as possible. The Republicans here are fully aware of the importance that will be attached to the result of the October election in this State, and also of the fact that the last hopes of the Greeleyites are to be revived or buried in that election. They appreciate the vital character of the issue, and they say they are prepared to meet it.

THE ATTACKS ON HARTRANFT.

The personal warfare on Gen. Hartranft, the Republican candidate for Governor, waged in the interest of a small clique of professed Republicans, is the source from whence the coalition draw all their comfort, and whatever hopes they have of electing Bucktaiw. But it is a small encouragement and is growing weaker every day. As the character of the men who make these attacks, and the motives that inspire them become better known, they lose all their force, and, so far from injuring, they even bring sympathy and support to the candidate unjustly assailed. The charges against Gen. Hartranft have not only been completely refuted, but it has been shown that they originated in spite and revenge against the General because he persisted, and still persists, in bringing the robbers of the public treasury to justice. The leader in the attacks on Hartranft is one Dr. Payne, who was proved by a Committee of the Pennsylvania Legislature, last Winter, to have sold diplomas of the Medical College under his charge to persons without any qualifications whatever as physicians and even to infants. The proof was so clear, that the charter of Payne's medical shop was repealed by the Legislature. This Payne is one of the bondsmen for Evans, against whom a suit is pending for the recovery of $300,000 of the funds of the State, and it is well known that if Hartranft is elected Governor he will insist, as he has done heretofore, in prosecuting the suit to the bitter end. It can be proved, and the proof will be forthcoming, that Payne stated in the presence of a clergyman and two other witnesses, that in the division of the $300,000 of the Evans plunder, a mortgage of $54,000 on Forney Prairie, in Nebraska, was selected. This is probably a falsehood, as Payne's statements on any subject, unless corroborated, are not entitled to credit, but it ought to show Mr. Forney the disreputable character of the witness whose charges against Gen. Hartranft he has seen fit to endorse and reiterate in his journal. A vindication of Gen. Hartranft will be made by the distinguished Philadelphia lawyer, B. H. Brewster, at the Wistaw hall here to-morrow night. Mr. Brewster was Attorney-General of the State during a large portion of the time that Gen. Hartranft held the office of Auditor-General, and he stated to me in conversation, yesterday, that he never knew a better or more faithful public official than Hartranft. A vindication coming from a man of the high character of Mr. Brewster, who, until recently, has been classed by the Liberal Republicans, cannot but have great weight with the voters of Pennsylvania. The Greeley Democratic coalition will have quite enough to do, however, before the campaign is through to defend their candidate Bucktaiw, who was one of the most notorious and bitter Copperheads Pennsylvania had during the war, while Gen. Hartranft was among its most brave and patriotic Generals. Moreover, the Democrats are determined to force Bucktaiw to define his position on Greeleyism, a thing which he has not yet done, and which, when he does do it, is bound to create a row. There is far more dissatisfaction among the Democracy in Pennsylvania than in New-York at the indorsement by the Baltimore Convention of Greeley as their candidate for President, and they are bound to know whether Bucktaiw approves of that little piece of political jugglery. It he says he does, they will "scratch" him by thousands, and if he says he don't, he will get just as badly scratched by the Greeleyites. In either case he will lose more votes from the coalition party than he will gain from the enemies of Hartranft. But it is a curious fact, that even if Bucktaiw were to be elected, no one of either party here pretends to claim the State for Greeley. The most the coalitionists hope for by Bucktaiw's election is the "moral effect," as they call it, which such an event would have on the November election in other States. As for Pennsylvania all admit that it is certain for Grant in November.

REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS.

Again, at the Exchange, yesterday, Friday, Sept. 13, no business was transacted, all the legal auctions noticed for the day having been adjourned as follows: Sale by Joseph McGuire of house and lot on Thirty-fourth-street, near Tenth-avenue, adjourned until the 20th inst. Sale by James M. Miller of house and lot No. 128 West Twenty-eighth-street, and leases of houses and lots adjoining, Nos. 332 and 334½, adjourned to same date. Sale by same auctioneer of one lot on the south-east corner of Fourth-avenue and One Hundred and Twenty-sixth-street, adjourned until the 24th inst.; and sale by Wm. Kennelly of house and lot No. 26 Great Jones-street, between Broadway and Bowery, until Oct. 28. The attendance during the day at the Exchange was light, and on the street the market was remarkably quiet.

The sales held at Throg's Neck, Westchester County, by J. R. Foley, on Thursday, Sept. 12, at which the balance of the property formerly owned by Ex-Gov. E. D. Morgan, was offered, was well attended, and the result highly satisfactory, 18 out of the 20 lots being disposed of at an average of $128 per lot, or $28,600 for the whole sold. The land lies on Long Island Sound, about one mile from the landing, and adjoins the property of Capt. Wright and Geo. T. Adee, and the latter party was a large purchaser at the sale. On the 24 inst., the remaining land, together with some thirty-nine lots, was sold in one parcel, for $15,600; also, some seventy-five lots for $13,600 in the aggregate. The land was sold in plots, varying in size from half an acre to one acre, and the entire tract, containing somewhat over forty-one acres, has now been sold for $62,000 in the total, a very successful result, as far as establishing the value of Westchester County real estate is concerned. The buyers were principally from Harlem and the neighborhood, but had the sale been given more publicity so as to attract the attention of City capitalists, better figures even would probably have resulted. For the information contained in the above report we are indebted to Messrs. Blackwell & Co., No. 58 Liberty-street.

For sale at the Exchange, the elegant seat by Alfred Bate, is announced of two lots on the east side of First-avenue, between One Hundred and Twenty-fifth and One Hundred and Twenty-first streets. At Rye, Westchester County, also today, at 12 M., on the premises, E. H. Ludlow & Co. advertise the sale, by order of the Supreme Court, under the direction of Alfred T. Ackert, Esq., referee, of a valuable plot of ground with frame dwelling and stable thereon, situate on Grace Church-street, within three minutes walk of the railway dock. In regard to the auction sale next week, a full report will be published as usual in this column on Monday.

At private contract, A. D. Melhok, Jr., & Brother, No. 6 Pine-street, report having recently closed the following sales of New Jersey real estate, all bona fide transactions, none of the prices being traded or exchanged: Stores and one city lots, at Orange, sold for $30,800; house and seven acres of land, at Plainfield, sold for $20,000; farm of sixty-eight acres, at Union-twp., sold for $52,800; farm of thirty acres, at Westfield, sold for $13,000; thirty acres of unimproved land, at Cranford, sold for $12,000, and six acres of unimproved land, at Elizabeth, sold for $6,500.

How the Republicans are Working to Redeem the State.

Effect of the Victory in Maine—Greeleyite Abuse of the President—A Campaign Distinguished by Reckless Lying.

From Our Special Correspondent.

INDIANAPOLIS, Wednesday, Sept. 11, 1872.

"There is triumph in the air." The glorious news from Maine is already bearing good fruit, and there are signs that henceforth, until the second Tuesday in October, the Republicans of Indiana, encouraged by the deeds of their brethren in the Pine-tree State, are to work with a zeal which will know no flagging, with the hope of rivalling the splendid achievement of the East. The Democrats are already demoralized, and are wrangling with the Vermont and Maine returns in a spiritless sort of way. The "gain fever" has spread from the offices of metropolitan newspapers to the West, and many of these deciduous Democrats are exploring on these returns most unmercifully, hoping to find that wonderful "per cent." which has the surprising property of changing a crushing defeat into a splendid victory. No work is so profitless, none so dispiriting as this, and as the Maine glory has but incited the Republicans to greater industry and renewed efforts it may be safely said "there is triumph in the air."

ANIMUS OF THE CAMPAIGN.

It would be an insult to the intelligence of the people of Indiana to believe that this contest will end otherwise than in a decided Republican victory. Here, as elsewhere, the coalitionists have had no other political stock in trade than reckless libels upon the President. Long ago they dropped all pretense of civil service reform, and since Mr. Greeley's Portland speech, announcing in more courtly phrase the old plundering doctrine, "to the victors belong the spoils," they have scarcely dared to refer to the subject. Revenue reform was strangled at Cincinnati in nominating Greeley, so they have nothing to say about that; and deprived of these two themes, they are reduced to beggary. Therefore they have been compelled to depend solely upon personal abuse of the President, and they have gone to it with a recklessness as amazing as it is stupid. Mr. Hendricks began his canvass with declaring in his Terre Haute speech that Gen. Grant had written a letter dated in February, 1869, returning thanks for a present of one hundred thousand dollars, when he must have known, as everybody else did, that it was written in 1868, when Gen. Grant was only a soldier, who had no thought of becoming a candidate for political office. Yet the tale thus started has kept far in advance of the truth ever since, although it has been shown to be a lie time and again. This bemaning was the key note of the campaign on the coalition side, and ever since Gen. Grant has been subjected to the grossest misrepresentation and coarsest vituperation whenever one of these peculiar Reformers has risen to address the people. He has been charged with appointing all his relatives to office, with accepting all sorts of bribes for all offices, large and small, with habitual and beastial intoxication, one of their speakers the other day alleging that lately the President and Gen. Horace Porter were reeling drunk through the public thoroughfares at Long Branch. I took the name of this atrocious slanderer with the view of giving him the unenviable notoriety he deserves, but have unfortunately mislaid it, and the gentleman who gave me the information is now beyond my reach. But this libeler is not much worse than Mr. Hendricks himself, who, not content with misstating the date of a letter, has lately concocted a new slander in his insinuation that President Grant had been controlled by corrupt motives in his approval of the Pacific Railroad bill, but Senator Morton speedily silenced that charge by showing from the official record that the bill was passed before Gen. Grant became President, not only with the approval of Mr. Hendricks, then Senator of the United States, but that he made an urgent speech in its behalf. The lone exploded lie about the cottage at Long Branch being presented to Gen. Grant by Mr. Murphy has also been used by some of the coalition orators, and in short, there is no one of the many slanders which have been invented, and most of which have been abandoned by wiser opponents, who saw they were making the President friends instead of enemies, which are not yet bowled daily from some Indiana hustings, with the hope of deceiving some honest yeoman into the support of Greeley. "Secor claims," "Chorpenning frauds," "Seneca sand-stone," "bull-pups," and all the other enormities are yet set up on their rickety legs, and strenuous efforts are made to have them do duty as proofs of official corruption. Now, lest it may be doubted that Greeleyites are really engaged in this nefarious business, I may add that the Terre Haute Journal constantly reiterates the story of Grant receiving the $100,000 in February, 1869; not only that, but it has just published the following communication:

To the Editor of the Journal:

A man jealous of his honor, and desirous of washing out the sin and crime of a life of inebriation, and wishing to place himself right before his countrymen, would immediately confess his crime in forging a new date to his letter, as the President has done, and sue for mercy and plead for forgiveness from an injured people. The forgery places the President in a tight place, and to rid his character of the blotch it would seem to right-thinking, honorable people, worth far more than to be President. Our President today manifestly does not believe in that good motto. DEMOCRAT.

Here is a direct charge that the President has himself altered the date of his letter; and it is such creatures as the one who would write this infamous libel, who "Rah for Greeley" with the greatest unction. I must mention also that the Greeley Press just now is giving currency to that coinage of Kilpatrick's brain, to the effect that Judge Hoar presented Gen. Grant with a library, worth twenty-five thousand dollars, on the day before his inauguration, and the Republican papers are compelled to give space to the letter of Judge Hoar branding that falsehood as it deserves.

REPUBLICAN TACTICS.

Much of the time of the Republicans is naturally occupied in exposing the constantly increasing slanders upon the President, and the campaign here, as everywhere else, has in some measure degenerated into a personal one. But the Republicans do not make the mistake of allowing themselves to be absorbed by this duty, to the exclusion of everything else. On the contrary, they never omit an opportunity to present to the people these substantial claims of the Republican Party to popular support, which the Coalitionists can not freely deny, since they pretended to adopt the Cincinnati platform. The great responsibilities the party assumed on coming into power in 1861, the devotion to the nation and to liberty with which it met those responsibilities, its great achievements during the past twelve years, and its full redemption of every promise it ever made the people, are forcibly impressed every day from the hustings. Nor do the Republican speakers and journals omit to show every day the precise character of the hand-clasping between Greeley and the baser Democrats. The true nature of the coalition as one made by the sacrifice of principle for the sake of possible spoils is impressed in every possible way upon the popular mind. So far as Dan. Voorhees is concerned, this end is achieved by the simple expedient of making him answer himself, as he often finds the stand from which he is to urge old Democrats to support Greeley plastered over with hand-bills containing pithy extracts from his speech denouncing and renouncing Greeley immediately after his nomination. The other "Old Liners" who have not laid themselves open to this style of attack are taken face to face with their records by Republican orators, and thus shown to have been in former days first class political scoundrels or to be now unmitigated political hypocrites. This sort of warfare upon the cheat has had a very great effect, and it is chiefly due to it that the Democratic masses are beginning to desert Greeley. The sham of the affair is so outrageous that many Democrats have been driven by their disgust to open advocacy of Grant, while others are remaining sullenly aloof from all active participation in the campaign. The latter class, however, attend the meetings of both sides generally, and their presence gives respectability in size to the Greeley gatherings, but throw over them a funereal aspect.

Taking the canvass as a whole, I have now fairly outlined the method of each party in carrying it on; but there are, of course many special features which have been omitted. One of these is, however, so characteristic of the contest on the Republican side thus it must be mentioned. It will be remembered that Mr. Sumner, in the speech which he left as a legacy to the Democratic Party, closed his arrument for the defeat of Grant by declaring that "he is a picture at the national capital, recalling victories over fellow-citizens." This atrocious declaration that the great soldier of the Republic should be driven from the capital because he triumphed over the rebellion, has roused the anger of some of those patriots of whom Indiana gave the nation so many. In one of his late speeches, Hon. Wm. Williams—known all over the State as "Billy" Williams—took this passage for a text, and drew a vivid picture of all one-armed and one-legged soldiers, all the old, tattered battle-flags, borne with glory on so many bloody fields, and every other reminder of the war, no matter how sacred, being buried out of sight lest they might offend some impalpable rebel. The effect of this portion of his speech was most striking, and it is safe to say that Greeley will not get the vote of a single Republican who heard it.

INCREASING CONFIDENCE.

But it is becoming more apparent every day that as enlightenment proceeds the Republicans who were led astray are dropping away from Greeley. Every day reports are received of Republicans who have returned to the fold of their party and it almost invariably happens that these returning prodigals become more active and zealous in the good cause than they ever were before. This circumstance is one of the causes of the generally increased confidence of the Republicans, but one of equal weight is the increasing indifference of the bulk of the Democracy to Greeley. As defeat after defeat overtakes the coalition in other States the Democracy becomes more inert, and it was only yesterday I heard a Democrat of some prominence in this city complaining that Mr. Alvord, the Chairman of the Democratic State Committee, seemed to have lost all his energy and was letting the campaign go against him by default. When it was remarked that it was a somewhat difficult task to work up Democratic enthusiasm for Greeley, the complaining Greeleyite admitted the fact, and said he supposed they were to be beaten anyhow, and it might be as well not to be too demonstrative for "Old Chappaqua." But it must not be inferred that the Democrats are making no efforts, as it is only when their work is contrasted with that of the Republicans that it seems to be nothing. Never before has so much work been done in a campaign, never has it been more systematically and better done, than in this by the Republicans. A year ago last March, when the numerous speeches constantly being delivered in all parts of the State, and the many demonstrations like that in this City Tuesday night, is open to the public view, but there is much more which is equally effective which is not seen. Col. Foster has the State now thoroughly organized by school districts, and through district canvassers every voter is personally visited and reasoned with. There is no danger in letting the enemy know this fact, for he cannot possibly counteract the energy which is thus powerfully at work; reason reaching the voter, Greeleyism becomes helpless and hopeless. In addition to this personal canvass, thousands of documents which thoroughly expose the falsehoods and false pretenses of the coalition have been sent all over the State, and thousands are following them every day. In view of this thorough organization, this increasing labor, it is not singular that Col. W. R. Holloway and a few other prominent and aggressive Republicans of this city keep in the Journal an advertisement like this!

Any person or persons who desire to wager any amount from $100 to $5,000 that Greeley and Brown will be elected President and Vice-President in November next can be accommodated by addressing REPUBLICAN, Journal Office.

Nor is it singular that thus far the advertisement has not noticed any Greeleyite into the desperate speculation. Knowing, as they do, their condition in this State they can hope for little chance elsewhere, and seem to have wisely determined to keep their cash safe in their pockets.

With their chances constantly diminishing; with even Indiana, on which they counted so confidently, slipping from their grasp, and with the consciousness that their abasement has been in vain, the Democrats are already sure that the triumph in the air is not for them. E. C.

BOILER EXPLOSION.

Three Persons Killed and Nine Injured—Fragments Carried Squares Away.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 13.—At 10 o'clock this morning a new boiler at the foundry of Robert Jones, on the corner of Pearl and Ludlow streets, while being tested, exploded with great force, blowing off the roof of the building, and carrying pieces of the boiler several squares, instantly killing three persons and injuring nine others. The killed are Robert Jones, proprietor of the foundry; Evans H. Lloyd and Joseph Ubershlag, employes. Ubershlag's body was fearfully mangled, the hips crushed and bowels protruding. Lloyd was blown into a stable adjoining; his body was torn in pieces. He leaves a wife and child. The injured are Henry Young, who is badly hurt from falling timber, and also has the temporal artery severed; he may live. Thomas D. Davis and Edward Roberts are slightly hurt. Jerry Mulroy is badly scalded, has a leg broken, and an cut on the head; he will die. Frank Barringer is injured about the forehead. —— Flanagan, aged seventeen years, is fatally injured. Wm. Wimpleman has an arm broken and a cut over the eye. Dan. Madden had a leg broken. David Gaine was slightly injured.

One piece of the roof ascended in the air, and coming down crushed through the brick wall of a neighboring house. A piece of the boiler found a stopping place in the second story of a frame structure a square distant. There was but sixty pounds of steam on when the explosion occurred.

FORRESTER'S CASE.

"Detective" Samuel Felcher in a New Role—A Reminiscence of the Reno Brothers.

When the Reno brothers, types of the most daring of young Western criminals, were marched out of their prison, one starry night four years ago, to expiate by Lynch law one of their robberies, Frank Reno, the most human of the men, turned to Mr. George Carter, of Sayville, Ind., who was placing the noose around his neck, and said, "My end has come, and I curse one man for it. May his bones wither. His name is Felker." This man, a so-called detective, who himself has fallen under the grasp of the law on a charge of planning a murder, has again turned up as a discoverer of the Nathan murderer, and now that William Forrester has been acquitted, makes public some important facts tending to fasten the guilt of the Nathan murder on Forrester. The man's character is too well known for any reliance to be placed in his statements. At the time of the murder of the Joyce children, Felker swindled the parents of the murdered children out of $100, which he was subsequently compelled to refund. He endeavored to do the same at the time of the Nathan murder, but failed, owing to the foresight of Superintendent Kelso. He is a man whose only good fortune is that the law, mercifully constituted to preserve the innocent, is unable to grapple his misdeeds.

The Fall Book Trade-Sales—Yesterday's Catalogues.

The Fall book trade-sales were continued yesterday at Clinton Hall by George A. Leavitt & Co., auctioneers, the catalogues of three Philadelphia firms being gone through with, the attendance and the prices generally being good.

Charles Desilver's consignment of miscellaneous school-books was knocked down at fair figures, after which a lot of Bibles and photograph albums from George W. Harding were disposed of. A new royal quarto edition of the Bible, comprising the Apocrypha and a concordance, the Psalms in metre, tables of weights and measures, &c., Turkey morocco, London antique, with ten steel engravings, was sold for $6 25. The same fleur de-lis pattern, with corner plates and clasps of Etruscan gilt, brought $10. Claxton, Remsen and Haffelfinger's consignment of poetical, law, medical, scientific and juvenile books was the last lot put up. Boswell's Life of Johnson, edited by Croker, four volumes, 12mo., was sold in cloth for eighty cents per volume; Moore's Life of Byron, one volume, 8vo., cloth extra, brought $1 20; Gibbon's Rome, new edition in six volumes, was sold for $1 40 per volume; Goldsmith's complete works, with notes by James Prior and four vignettes on steel, four volumes, 12mo., sold for seventy-five, eighty and ninety cents per volume, according to the style of binding, in cloth, sheep and half calf.

Last evening black-books and stationery were disposed of, the attendance being small, but prices good. Today's sales will be of Roman Catholic books from P. Donahoe's, Boston; Eugene Cummiskey, Philadelphia, and the Catholic Publication Society, D. & J. Sadlier & Co. and P. O'Shea, of this City.

The lovers of the choicest current literature can supply their wants just now at Mr. Brentano's (No. 33 Union-square) well-filled counters. There is nothing really valuable that is not to be found at his establishment. Of recent English magazines he has received by the last steamer Saint Paul's, Temple Bar, London Society, Belgravia, The Cornhill, Macmillan's, Breton's Boys' Own, Good Words, Cassell's Magazine, Sunday Magazine, The People's Magazine, Bow Bells and The Englishwoman's Domestic Magazine. He also has The World of Fashion and The Milliner & Dressmaker for September. Nowhere else in the country can there be found so varied and interesting a collection of American as well as foreign publications. Readers should call at Mr. Brentano's at once.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Sept. 13.—The Metis disaster investigation was continued today:

Daniel N. McLean, the steward, testified that he saw that all the state-rooms were unlocked and the passengers got out; there were a good many lady passengers on board; he assisted many of them to adjust life-preservers; there were printed notices in every room directing passengers where to find life-preservers; witness weighs 207 pounds; he was saved on a cork mattress.

Wm. M. Pettick, fireman, was on duty when the collision occurred; afterward was relieved, and retired to his berth in the forecastle below the main deck; after I got into my berth, the second mate came down and held a lantern under my berth; looked under and reported no water coming in; soon after all the deck hands were called to come and help trim ship; when the sailors went out the ship was "listed" over on the port side; the next thing the water was coming in the dead lights on the port side about a foot above my berth, which was an upper berth; I tried to stop the water, so that I could sleep, but found I could not stop it as it was coming in too fast; so I stuck my head out of the bulkhead door into the forecastle floor; put my shoes on and went and reported to the bow watch man; was well acquainted with every hole and corner of the vessel; the bulkhead door was forward of the boiler; there is just room enough to get by forward of the boiler, the planks are nominally the bulkhead extends clear to the main deck; there is no bulkhead door; I knew, in '71, never knew of any holes being made in it; the forward bulkhead was built the same as the other one; the forecastle floor was about two feet from the bulkhead; I was in the forecastle floor; I know because I have been down it; there was a hole in the bulkhead below the forecastle floor; the fireman and myself were on the port side; to locate it it was where I got chopped through; it was large enough for me to go through, and I have been through; the second mate did not go down there at all; I was in the forecastle floor; the floor was just forward of the mainmast post; the second mate remained in the forecastle about three minutes; he was not there any longer; for he just went down, gave his lamp in, and went out; the ship went down not half an hour after I saw water on the forecastle floor; the second mate did not go into this hole in the bulkhead at all; he stuck his head in to the forward part-side of the forecastle, and looked under the upper berth; he did not go within ten feet of the scuttle in the forecastle floor; he did not come down again; no other man came down forward of the mainmast; I was driven out by the water; when I went out of the forecastle the water was about half a foot deep on the forecastle floor.

Frank Joseph, a deck watchman, testified that there were sixteen deck passengers; when the ship began to settle he took them all aft and upon the saloon-deck.

Bridget O'Brien testified: Was in the ladies' cabin; heard the warning given in that cabin.

Capt. David Ritchie, of the revenue-cutter Moccasin, said he was in Stonington harbor on the 5th ult., as near as he remembered; about 4 A. M. he boarded alongside from the steam-ship Narragansett with the First Officer of the Narragansett on board; he informed me that a boat from the steam-ship Metis had come to him and reported that that boat had left her disabled and helpless with 150 passengers on board of whose fate they knew nothing at all; immediately ordered steam; at fifteen minutes past ten we got under way; at forty-five minutes past ten I stopped the engines off Watch Hill, having found a boat lying outside of the surf loaded to the gunwale with people; got the people on to the steamer; then went down for the wrecked floating stuff; continued there until forty-five minutes past three P. M., having picked up seventeen dead bodies, and seeing no living; I started for Stonington, where I arrived at five P. M., with forty-two living and seventeen dead; those that were dead all had life-preservers on; the position of those I saw was natural and feet dried and black well up; the preservers were in most instances put on very well and in proper places; I don't know why I did not get notice sooner; the smack that had the party belonging to the Metis on board passed us about eight o'clock; I thought it was best to run for shelter enough to throw a biscuit on board before we went to breakfast without saying anything to me; I did not get notice until twenty minutes past nine A. M.; an hour and twenty minutes more than lost.

Lieut. Irish, of the revenue cutter Moccasin testified that he first saw the smack that had the steamer's people on board not far from 7 o'clock; the second officer informed me that the smack had left about eight o'clock so near that I could distinguish faces on board; I think any one could have made himself heard on any part of our deck; the sails have some distinguishing signals of distress on board before she passed us, which probably would have been seen, as we were watching her; if it had been made should have sent a boat to her immediately; we could have got back within an hour; we probably should then have saved half an hour of time before she passed; were at anchor inside the break-water; our colors were set at eight o'clock; I think I am tolerably familiar with vessels would have known we were a revenue cutter.

Capt. Jedediah Williams testified: I was formerly Superintendent of the Providence and New York Steamboat Line; it was a part of my duty to superintend the repairs of those boats; we altered the Metis by putting new state-rooms and saloon on the upper deck; the Metis had three water-lights on the bulkhead; when she was built, the forward one was twenty-five feet aft abaft the stem of the fore-castle bulkhead; the next was about forty feet abaft the first, and the third one about forty feet abaft the second, directly abaft the engine; the two last-named bulkheads inclosed the engine and boiler; the port one was cut through for men and officers to pass through; the starboard one was left open, so that it was the same as no bulkhead; I also had occasion to cut an open in the middle bulkhead; it was done for the purpose of putting in hammers and tongs in new boilers; I think it was two years ago last February; the holes cut in that bulkhead were fifteen or sixteen inches by two or two and a half feet; we also cut holes higher up, above the lower on freight deck; these holes were cut at the same time with the others; I should think they were two feet by two and a half or three feet; they were cut so that the hole went forward from the coal-bunkers into the freight hold forward, so as to relieve the coal-bunkers; these holes were stopped by extra stanchions being put on on the outside and bolted to the original stanchions, and then planks put on outside; my impression is that the bulkhead originally was two thickness of two-inch plank; the plank put in these openings was two thicknesses of matched stuff; I superintended the job of closing these holes myself; the work being done by C. & R. Pelton, of New-York; when I left that work I considered it as strong as the original bulkhead; the holes on top of the keelsons were stopped in a similar manner; I never had occasion to make openings in the forward bulkhead, and never heard of any being made.

A New Submarine Steam Torpedo at the Brooklyn Navy-Yard.

In pursuance of an order received from the Navy Department, a Board of Survey was convened at the Brooklyn Navy-yard Wednesday for the purpose of examining and experimenting on an iron steam submarine torpedo-boat, which was launched at the Brooklyn Navy-yard from the Ordnance Dock, on Tuesday afternoon. The Board of Survey consisted of the following officers: Commodore J. C. Howell, Commandant of the League Island Navy-yard; Vice-Admiral Rowan, Capt. G. Ransom, Commanders M. Sicard, W. Whiting and H. Erben, Chief Engineer W. W. Wood, Naval Constructor E. F. Delano, Lieut.-Commander Barclay, and other naval officers, who proceeded to investigate the power of action and capability of working while under water. The torpedo was built by Mr. Stetson, of New-Jersey.

She is about 100 feet long, cigar-shaped, and when in the water has scarcely ten inches above the surface. Her frame is of well-seasoned wood, transversed by iron beams and sheathed with iron plating chain riveted, and is capable, it is reported, of making eight miles an hour when under water. It is claimed that enough air can be pumped down her to enable her to be kept below the surface ten hours.

The great drawback to the boat is the close temperature, as the vessel is not provided with means of ventilation while under water.

The Chief Naval Constructor, Mr. B. F. Delano, says he has but little confidence in the torpedo, and thinks she is very unsafe. She requires a crew of about eighteen men to fully equip her and to work the machinery. She is intended for Harbor defenses. Experiments will shortly take place under water, when the real power of this torpedo will be fully developed.

Large Republican Meeting at Norfolk, N. Y.—Speech of Gen. E. M. Lee.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

NORFOLK, N. Y., Sept. 13.—Last night Gen. E. M. Lee addressed the largest political meeting ever held in this place. The Town Hall was packed, and many went away unable to obtain standing room. Gen. Lee, in a two hours' speech, full of closest logic and persuasive eloquence, reviewed the political situation in a masterly manner. He sharply criticised Mr. Greeley's vacillating course upon important public questions, and declared that if Greeley's policy had been followed there would have been no undivided American Republic to elect a President. The eloquent speaker was frequently interrupted by applause, and when at the close he expressed the hope that Greeley coalition would fail to receive the electoral vote of a single Northern State, the prophecy was received with outbursts of applause, the audience rising and giving hearty cheers for Grant and Wilson and Joy. At the close of the meeting a call was made for the formation of a Grant and Wilson Club, and 200 names were secured.

Democrats are daily dropping away from the Greeley coalition, and it has no Republican support.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

ITHACA, Sept. 13.—One of the largest and most enthusiastic audiences ever assembled in this place greeted Hon. Lyman Tremain this evening. The people began to assemble at an early hour, and long before the hour for the meeting every seat was occupied, and all available standing-room, while many turned away, unable to gain admittance. Capt. S. D. Wileox presided, and among the Vice-Presidents were Rev. Dr. Bristol, Hon. Ezra Cornell and Profs. Russell, Shaffer, Morris and Shackford, of Cornell University.

The speech of Mr. Tremain was an eloquent and forcible presentation of the issues of the campaign, and was listened to by the vast audience with the most earnest attention, only interrupted by frequent outbursts of hearty applause. Copies of the song, "God bless the flag," had been distributed, and at the close of the meeting the immense multitude united in singing that thrilling campaign song. The effect was electric. Some of the utmost enthusiasm prevailed, and the meeting broke up with cheer upon cheer for our standard-bearers, national and State.

The Republicans of this county are thoroughly aroused and well organized, and in Republican hands this county will give a majority for Grant and Wilson. Over 200 of the students of the University have united in a call for a meeting to be held to-morrow evening, for the purpose of organizing a Students' Grant and Wilson Club.

A GREELEY "REFORMER."

Will Mr. Tilton be Greeley's Spokesman?—Does the Express Greeley's Idea?—Political Advantage of Greeley Regulated with Views of Tilton and Woodhull—The Idea of Possible Morality—Who Would Not Vote for Greeley at Tilton's Request?—A Wine Lecturer for Decent Young Men to Listen To—Blasphemy and Indecency in Equal Proportions.

It is tolerably well known that, like many others who go for Greeley, Theodore Tilton does not support the philosopher as his first choice for the Presidency. The person who was, and probably is, honored by Tilton's preference for the Chief-Magistracy is Mrs. Victoria Woodhull-Blood alias Claflin. Tilton's penchant for the Woodhull has exposed him to a good many painful imputations during the campaign, of which the following may serve as a sample:

From the Boston Pilot.

We would ask one "friend" of Mr. Greeley, in particular and by name, to walk a little more in the shade if he really wishes to strengthen Mr. Greeley's position. We allude to Mr. Theodore Tilton. Who does he think he is winning over to Greeleyism by his stumping and sanctimoniousness? Is it the free-love interest he is after? Does Mr. Greeley really believe that the support of the Woodhulls and Claflins is needed to send him to the White House? We would suggest to Mr. Theodore Tilton that his friendship for Mr. Greeley, and Mr. Greeley's supposed friendship for him, is not a good selection card for Greeley. We see not the least difference between a protestation of love from Mrs. Woodhull and a protestation of friendship from Mr. Tilton. Mr. Greeley wouldn't be mad enough to allow this woman to "stump" for him; why, then, allow her biographer and professed admirer? We had a remnant of respect for the talents of Mr. Tilton until we read his Biography of Victoria Woodhull.

It is understood that Tilton chates a good deal under the slights which have been put upon him by the Democratic allies of Greeley. Disgusted with the effect of his recent efforts in Maine, he is said to contemplate a return to the Woodhull camp, under the banner of free love and the "pantarchy." Our exchanges have lately contained gossiping announcements of a change of "management" in the New-York Tribune. Country editors have professed to be in receipt of certain information that the "Professor" will shortly be requested to transfer the superintendence of the remarkable organ which he has in charge to the biographer of Mrs. Woodhull. Supporting Greeley is ruining the paper, it appears, and with Tilton's advent to the editorial chair, there will doubtless be a change of advocacy and of platform. The new candidate of the Tribune could in that case hardly be other than Mrs. Woodhull, as we have never heard that the editor elect favored the claims either of George Francis Train or Daniel Pratt. It may, therefore, be of some little interest to know what manner of person is Tilton's first choice. This will be found partially indicated in the following series of extracts from A Biographical Sketch of Victoria C. Woodhull, by THEODORE TILTON, published at the office of the Golden Age. Any little interest which the subject possesses is partially enhanced by the fact that the first edition of this remarkable production has been carefully bought up by its author, and we have not heard that the second edition (enlarged and improved) is as yet ready for publication. Read Tilton's remarks, and then remember that Tilton and Kilpatrick are the two chief hired advocates of Greeley:

AN OPEN WOMAN THERE MACAULAY.

"I shall swiftly sketch the life of Victoria Claflin Woodhull; a young woman whose career has been as singular as any heroine's in a romance; whose ability is at a rare and whose character of the rarest type; whose personal sufferings are of themselves a whole drama of pathos; whose name (through the malice of some and the ignorance of others) has caught a shadow in strange contrast with the white-robe of her life; whose position as a representative of her sex is at the greater return of modesty times renders her an object of peculiar interest to her fellow-citizens; and whose character (as enough as I know her well) I can portray without color or tinge from any other partiality save that I hold her in uncommon respect.

THE HEROINE IS CHRISTENED.

"As this was the year (1838) when Queen Victoria was crowned, the new-born babe, though cradled neither in purple nor fine linen, but comfortably swaddled in respectable poverty, was immediately christened (though without chrism) as the Queen's namesake; her parents little dreaming that their daughter would one day aspire to a higher throne than the English throne. The Queen, with that early maternal prediction which her subsequent life did so much to illustrate, foresaw that many glad mothers who were to bring babies into the world during that coronation year would name them after the chief lady of the earth; and accordingly she ordained a gift to all her little namesakes of Anno Domini 1838. As Victoria Claflin was one of these, she has lately been urged to make a trip to Windsor Castle to see the silver mug, and to receive the gift, and to receive the special souvenir which the Queen's namesake is supposed to hold still in store for the Ono babe that uttered its first cry as if to say "Long live the Queen!" Mrs. Woodhull, who is now a candidate for the Presidency of the United States, would defer this visit till after her election, when she will have a beautiful opportunity to invite her elder sister in sovereignty—the mother of our mother country—to visit her fairest daughter, the Republic of the West.

A PORTENTOUS SECRET.

"I must now let out a secret. She acquired her studies, performed her work, and lived her life by the help (as she believes) of heavenly spirits. From her childhood till now (having reached her thirty-third year) her anticipation of the other world has been more vivid than her realization of this. She has entertained angels, and not unawares. These gracious spirits have been her constant companions. They abide with her night and day. They dictate her life with daily revelation, and, like St. Paul, she is 'not disobedient to the heavenly vision.'"

A CHANCE FOR A PRESIDENTIAL MESSAGE.

"One-third of human life is passed in sleep; and in her case, a goodly fragment of this third is spent in trance. Seldom a day goes by but she enters into this fairy-land, or rather into this spirit-realm. In pleasant weather, she has a habit of sitting on the roof of her stately mansion on Murray Hill, and there communing hour by hour with the spirits. Moreover, I may as well mention here as later, that every characteristic utterance which she gives to the world is dictated while under spirit-influence, and most often in a totally unconscious state. The words that fall from her lips are garnered by the swift pen of her husband, and published almost verbatim as she gets and gives them. To take an illustration, after her recent nomination to the Presidency by "The Victoria League," she sent to that Committee a letter of superior dignity and moral weight. It was a composition she had dictated while so outwardly oblivious to the dictation, that when she ended and awoke, she had no memory at all of what she had just done. The product of that strange and weird mood was a beautiful piece of English, not unworthy of Macaulay (sic.)

SHAVING THE EDGE OF BLASPHEMY.

"In quoting this passage, I wish to add that its author is a person of no special literary training; indeed, so averse to the pen that, of her own will, she rarely dips it into ink, except to sign her business autograph; nor would she ever write at all except for those spirit-promptings which she dare not disobey; and she could not possibly have produced the above peroration except by some strange intellectual quickening—some ever-breeding moral help. This (as she says) she derives from the spirit-world. One of her texts is, "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills whence cometh my help—my help cometh from the Lord who made heaven and earth." She reminds me of the old engraving of St. Gregory dictating his homilies under the outspread wing of the Holy Dove.

IS THIS TILTON?

"The chief among her spiritual visitants, and one who has been a majestic guardian to her from the earliest years of her remembrance, she describes as A matured man of stately figure, clad in a Greek tunic, solemn and graceful in the aspect, strong in his influence, and altogether dominant over her life. For many years, notwithstanding an almost daily visit to her visions, he withheld his name, nor would her most importunate questionings induce him to utter it. But he always promised that in due time he would reveal his identity. Meanwhile he prophesied to her that she would rise to great distinction; that she would emerge from her poverty and live in a stately house; that she would win great wealth in a city, which he pictured as crowded with ships; that she would publish and conduct a journal; and that, finally, to crown her career, she would become the ruler of her people.

ONLY DEMOSTHENES.

"At length, after patiently waiting on this spirit-guide for twenty years, one day in 1860, during a temporary sojourn in Pittsburg, and while she was sitting at a marble table, he suddenly appeared to her, and wrote on the table, in English letters, the name "Demosthenes." At first the writing was indistinct, but grew to such a figure that the brightness filled the room.

"The apparition, familiar as it had been before, now affrighted her to trembling. The stately and commanding spirit told her to journey to New-York, where she would find, at No. 17 Great Jones-street, a house in readiness for her, equipped in all things to house each tenant. She unhesitatingly obeyed, although his name was new to her and she had never heard of Great Jones-street, for until that necessary moment had entertained an intention of taking such a residence. On entering the house, it fulfilled in reality the picture which the new of it in her vision—the self-same hall, library, rooms and furniture. Startling with some bewilderment into the library, she reached out her hand by chance, and, without knowing what she did, took up a book, which, on idly looking at its title, she saw (to her blood-chilling astonishment) to be the Orations of Demosthenes."

THE HEROINE AS A "NERVIN."

"Hitherto her clairvoyant faculty had been put to no pecuniary use, but she was now directed by the spirits to repair to Indianapolis, there to announce herself as a medium, and to treat patients for the cure of disease. Taking rooms in the Bates House, and publishing a card in the journals, she found herself able, on calling her callers, to tell by imagination their names, their residences, and their maladies. In a few days she became the town's talk. Her marvellous performances in clairvoyance being noised abroad, people flocked to her from a distance. Her rooms were crowded, and her purse grew fat. She reaped a golden harvest—including, as its worthiest part, golden opinions from all sorts of people. Her countenance would often glow as with a sacred light, and she became an object of religious awe to many wonder-stricken people whose inward lives she had revealed. Moreover, her unpretentious modesty, and her perpetual disclaimer of any merit or power of her own, and the entire crediting of this to spirit-influence, augmented the interest with which all spectators regarded the amiable prodigy. First at Indianapolis, and afterward at Terre Haute, she wrought some apparently miraculous cures. She straightened the feet of the lame; she opened the ears of the deaf; she detected the robbers of a bank; she brought to light hidden crimes; she solved physiological problems; she unveiled business secrets; she prophesied future events."

OVER THE EDGE OF BLASPHEMY.

"One day, during a severe illness of her son, she left him to visit her patients, and on her return was startled with the news that the boy had died two hours before. "No," she exclaimed, "I will not permit his death." And, with frantic energy she stripped her boosom naked, caught up his lifeless form, pressed it to her bosom, and sitting thus, flesh to flesh, sitted insensibly into a trance in which she remained seven hours; at the end of which time she awoke, a perspiration started from his clammy skin, and the child that had been thought dead was brought back again to life—and lives to this day in sad half-death. It is her belief that the spirit of Jesus Christ brooded over the lifeless form, and reworked the miracle of Lazarus for a sorrowing woman's sake.

A MARRIAGE "MADE IN HEAVEN."

"There is a maxim that marriages are made in heaven, albeit contradicted by the Scripture, which declares that in heaven there is neither marrying nor giving in marriage. But even against the Scripture, it is safe to say that Victoria's second marriage was made in heaven; that is, it was decreed by the self-same spirits whom she is ever ready to follow, whether they lead her for discipline into the valley of the shadow of death, or for comfort in those ways of pleasantness which are paths of peace. Col. James H. Blood, commander of the Sixth Missouri Regiment, who at the close of the war was elected City Auditor of St. Louis, who became President of the society of spiritualists in that place, and who had himself been, like Victoria, the legal partner of a morally sundered marriage, called one day on Mrs. Woodhull to consult her as a spiritualistic physician, (having never met her before,) and was startled to see her passing into a trance during which she announced unconsciously to herself that his future destiny was to be linked with hers in marriage. Thus, to their mutual amazement, has to their subsequent happiness, they were betrothed on the spot by "the powers of the air." The legal tie by which they bound themselves to each other was afterwards, by mutual consent, annulled—the necessary form of Illinois law being complied with to this effect. But the marriage stands on its merits, and is, to all who witness its harmony, known to be a sweet and accordant union of congenial souls."

THE VIRTUE OF BEING "MUCH MARRIED."

"For this piece of noble conduct—what is commonly called her living with two husbands under one roof—she has received not so much censure on earth as I think she will receive reward in heaven. No other passage of her life more signally illustrates the nobility of her moral judgments or the supernal courage with which she stands by her convictions. I fear all the clamorous tongues in Christendom, though they should simultaneously cry out against her, "Fie, for shame!" could persuade her to turn this wretched wreck from her home. And I say so in my heart, and I will maintain this opinion against the combined Pecksniffs of the whole world.

A FIRST-CLASS CERTIFICATE FROM "ONE WHO KNOWS."

"This act and the malice of enemies, together with her bold opinions on social questions, have combined to give her reputation a stain. But no slander ever fell on any human soul with greater injustice. A more unsullied woman does not walk the earth. She carries in her very face the fair legend of a character kept pure by a sacred fire within. She is one of those aspiring devotees who tread the earth merely as a stepping-stone to heaven, and whose chief ambition is finally to present herself at the supreme bar tribunal, "spotless, and without wrinkle, or blemish, or any such thing." I know her as well as I do, I cannot hear an accusation against her without recalling Tennyson's line of King Arthur,

"'Is thy white blameless accounted blame?'"

THE HEROINE TAKES TO WALL-STREET.

"Fulfilling a previous prophecy, and following a celestial mandate, in 1869 she founded a bank and published a journal. These two events took the town by storm. When the doors of her office in Broad-street were first thrown open to the public, several thousand visitors came in a flock on the first day. The "lady brokers," as they were called, (a strange confession that brokery are not always gentlemen) were besieged like princesses in a siege. The daily Press interviewed them, the weekly wits satirized them, the comic sheets caricatured them; but like a couple of fresh young dolphins breasting the sea side by side, they showed themselves native to the element, and theft great gaudy every threatening wave that broke over their heads. The breakers could not dash the brokers.

"Indomitable in their energy, the sisters won the good graces of Commodore Vanderbilt—a fine old gentleman of comfortable means, who of all the lower animals, prefers the horse, and of all the higher virtues admires pluck. Both with and without Commodore Vanderbilt's help, Mrs. Woodhull has more than once shown the pluck that has held the rein of the stock market as the Commodore holds his horse. Her journal, as one sees it week by week, is generally a willow-basket full of audacious manuscripts, apparently picked up at random and thrown together pell-mell, stunning the reader with a medley of politics, finance, free-love and the pantarchy. This sheet, when the divinity that shapes its ends shall begin to add to the rough-hewing a little smooth-shaping; in other words, when its unedited chaos shall come to be moulded by the spirits to the order which is heaven's first law; this not ordinary but "extraordinary" journal, which is edited in one world, and published in another, will become less a confusion to either, and more a power for both.

MOURNER TUNSON COME AGAIN.

"One night in December, 1869, while she lay in deep sleep, her Greek guardian came to her, and sitting transfigured by her couch, wrote on a scroll (so that she could not only see the words, but immediately dictated them to her watchful amanuensis) the memorable document now known in history as "The Memorial of Victoria C. Woodhull"—a petition addressed to Congress, claiming under the Fourteenth Amendment the right of women as of other "citizens of the United States" to vote in "the States wherein they reside"—asking, moreover, that the State of New-York, of which she was a citizen, should be restrained by Federal authority, from preventing her exercise of this constitutional right. As up to this time neither she nor her husband had been greatly interested in woman suffrage, he had no sooner written this manifesto from her lips than he woke her from her trance, and protested against the communication as nonsense, believing it to be a trick of some evil-disposed spirits.

THE IMAGE OF HIS DREAMS.

"I must say something of her personal appearance, although it defies portrayal, whether by photograph or pen. Neither tall nor sheet, stout nor slim, she is of medium stature, lithe and elastic, free and graceful. Her side face, looked at over her left shoulder, is of perfect aquiline outline, as classic as ever went into a Roman marble, and resembles the masque of Shakespeare taken after death; the same view, looking from the right, is a little broken and irregular; and the front face is broad, with prominent cheek bones, and with some unshapely nasal lines. Her countenance is never twice alike, so variable is its expression and so dependent on her moods. Her soul comes into it and goes out of it, giving her at one time the look of a superior and almost saintly intelligence, and at another leaving her dull, common place and unpossessing. When under a strong spiritual influence, a strange and mystical light irradiates from her face, reminding the beholder of the Hebrew Lawgiver who gave to men what he received from God, and whose face during the transfer shone.

HER "VIEWS" IN A NUT-SHELL.

"In making an epitome of her views, I may say that in politics she is a downright Democrat, scorning to divide her fellow-citizens into upper and lower classes, but ranking them all in one comprehensive equality of rights, privilege and opportunity. Concerning finance, which is a favorite topic with her, she holds that gold is not the true standard of money value, but that the Government should abolish the gold standard, and make its notes instead, giving to them a fixed and permanent value, and circulating them as the only money. On social questions her theories are similar to those which have long been taught by John Stuart Mill and Elizabeth Cady Stanton, and which are styled by some as Free-love doctrines, while others reject this appellation on account of its popular association with the idea of a promiscuous intimacy between the sexes—the essence of her system being that marriage is of the heart and not of the law, that when love ends marriage should end with it, being dissolved by nature, and that no civil statute should outwardly bind two hearts which have been inwardly sundered. And finally, in religion she is a spiritualist of the most mystical and ethereal type.

"THEY DIDN'T KNOW EVERYTHING DOWN IN SUDER."

"On the other hand, she is passionately eager to see the spirits face to face—to summon them at her will and commune with them at her pleasure. Twice (as she unshakably believes) she has seen a vision of Jesus Christ—honored thus doubly over St. Paul, who saw his Master but once, and then was overcome by the sight. She never goes to any church—save to the solemn temple whose altar is the sky, whose hangings are night, where she sits, like Simeon Stylites on his pillar, a worshipper in the sky. Against the mockeries of her childish education, the spirits have taught her that He, whom the Church calls the Savior of the world is not God, but man.

A PARAGON FOR THE PRESIDENCY.

"Her enemies (save those of her own household) are strangers. To see her is to respect her—to know her is to vindicate her. She has some impetuous and headlong faults, but were she without the same traits which produce these she would not possess the mad and magnificent energies which (if she lives) will make her a heroine in history. So, whether buffeted by criticism or defamed by slander, she carries herself in that religious peace which, through all turbulence, is a "measureless content." When apparently about to be struck down, she gathers unseen strength and goes forward, conquering and to conquer. Known only as a rich iconoclast, and ranked even with the most uncouth of those noise-makers who are waking a sleepy world before its time, she beats her daily gong of business and reform with notes not unmusical but strong, yet mellows the outward rudeness of the rhythm by the inward and devout song of one of the sincerest, most reverent, and divinely gifted of human souls.

ON MARRIAGE.

Law cannot change what nature has already determined. Neither will love obey if law command. Law cannot compel two to love. It has nothing to do either with love or with its absence. Love is superior to all law, and so also is hate, indifference, disgust and all other human sentiments which are evoked in the relations of the sexes. It legitimately and logically follows, if love have anything to do with marriage, that law has nothing to do with it. And, on the contrary, if law have anything to do with marriage, that love has nothing to do with it. And there is no escaping the deduction.

ON AFFINITIES.

Two persons, a male and female, meet, and are drawn together by a mutual attraction—a natural feeling unconsciously arising within their natures of which neither has any control—which is demonstrated love. This is a matter that concerns these two, and no other living soul has any human right to say aye, yes or no, since it is a matter in which none except the two have any interest. The law of God from which it is the duty of these two to exclude every other person, since no one can love for another or determine why another loves. * * *

This marriage is performed without special mental volition upon the part of either, although the intellect may approve what the affections determine; that is to say, they marry because they love, and they love because they can neither present nor cause it. Suppose, after this marriage has continued an indefinite time, the unity between them departs, would they be bound by their convictions? Not all the clamorous tongues in Christendom, though they should simultaneously cry out against her, "Fie, for shame!" could persuade her to turn this wretched wreck from her home. ## AFFAIRS IN ENGLAND.

The Autumn Manoeuvres—Bloodless Battles—Fridays in the Field—A Charge of Wasps—The New Radical Movement.

From Our Own Correspondent.

LONDON, Saturday, Aug. 31, 1872.

The Northern and Southern Armies have now taken the field in earnest. All week they have been marching and drilling and fighting little private battles within their own lines. Left against right, and division against division, just to feel their legs and try their wind; and in another day or two the armies will come into actual collision. The Prince of Wales goes down to join his division in the Southern Army today, and the Duke of Cambridge, who has just returned from Germany, where he has been drinking the waters to recruit himself for the arduous campaign, also makes his first appearance among the troops. As Commander-in-Chief he is neutral between the contending armies, and acts as chief umpire. It is his business to prescribe the "general idea" which is supposed to govern each day's movements, to see that it is properly carried out within the limits of discretion allowed to the rival Generals, to determine with which side victory rests at the end of the day's work, and then to assemble the chief officers and deliver a sort of off-hand, conversational lecture on the proceedings which have just taken place. Capt. Prince Arthur, who is Brigade Major in the Northern Army, has been with his brigade (which includes his own regiment, the Rifles) from the first day it set out on its march, and he shared all its fatigues and labors. As Brigade-Major he has, of course, his horse, but he has occasionally marched on foot at the head of its company. He is a modest, hard-working, and highly efficient officer, and extremely popular both with officers and men. As yet the armies have only been doing routine work, and few incidents of interest have occurred. Last year a stampede of cavalry horses invested the opening of the campaign with a certain degree of dramatic excitement. This year nothing more serious has yet occurred than a sudden and startling onset of wasps, which, however laughable, at one moment threatened to be attended with serious results. It was Lord Mark Kerr's division (Northern Army) which was thus attacked. A cluster of the vicious insects settled on the back of the General's horse, which began to plunge furiously. This was only a preliminary skirmish, however, and in a few seconds the staff were enveloped in a cloud of wasps. The horses kicked and reared; reinforcements of the enemy kept pouring in, and the head of the column soon found itself surrounded by myriads of stinging foes. The convulsive movements of the horses thus assailed frightened the other horses, and a scene of dangerous confusion occurred. Lord Mark Kerr, as soon as he got back to earth, for at first his powerful charger made a series of wild leaps as if bound for the skies, with great presence of mind, halted the column, and then turned it aside from the road into a barley field, where a good screen of trees kept off the enemy. Presently the wasps began to settle down, and a furious hope of two sergeants and an adjutant carried the position and smothered the foe en masse, by a stealthy advance with shovels full of wet clay. It is not stated whether a medal is to be given for this valiant exploit. If nests of wasps could be carried about in ammunition carts and exploded on the enemy at well-chosen movements, a new turn might be given to some of the operations of war.

THE MARCH THROUGH STRATHFIELDSAYE.

One of the most interesting events in the march of the Northern Army was the defiling past the statue of the Duke of Wellington in Strathfieldsaye Park—the estate presented to the Duke by the nation. The statue stands on a pretty green common before the park gates, and two brigades, with cavalry and artillery, made a detour from their straight road in order to do honor to the memory of the great Captain. The present Duke, a quiet, mild-looking, white-haired old gentleman, with something of his father's nose, but nothing of his father's personal statelness or force of character, was there on a peaceful cob, and the Duchess, in her pony carriage. The Generals took their places at the head of their respective brigades, and as the troops marched past all saluted the statue of the hero. If the Duke had lived to see the sight, he would have appreciated the compliment; but he would also have been rather surprised at the equipment of the force, and the changed conditions of warfare conducted with breech-loaders and rifled cannon. It is, of course, too soon yet to say much of the evidence afforded by these manoeuvres as to the efficiency or otherwise of our army. As far as the personal appearance of the men is concerned, it seems to be admitted that nothing could be finer. They have marched well, and have done what work they have as yet had to do smartly and thoroughly, and their excellent behavior has excited general admiration in the country through which they have passed. In physical strength, they seem to be quite up to the mark for a fatiguing campaign. On the other hand, the Generals have not shown up so well as the men. There appears to be a looseness and indecision in their management of troops, and a want of appreciation of the new conditions of war, which are not encouraging. A new system of drill has been devised to suit long-range artillery and musketry, but it has been announced that it will only be partially carried out in the manoeuvres; and it is not unnaturally asked, what can be the good of practicing troops in obsolete movements which would simply lead to their destruction if attempted in actual warfare. Col. Marshall has directed the Life Guards to cover their helmets and cuirasses with some dark composition, which prevents them from flashing in the sun, and thus becoming a mark for the enemy. This tardy act of common sense stands quite alone. Anybody might imagine that our cavalry, with their glittering and jingling, were especially equipped with a view to attract attention, yet for outpost and other work a conspicuous appearance is simply fatal. The whole dress of the army requires to be revised in accordance with common-sense notions and sanitary laws. The time which has been taken in bringing the troops together, and in welding them into corps d'armée, has been excessive compared with what the Germans are in the habit of doing, and the Control Department, which has charge of the supplies, is working in a very artificial manner; that is to say, getting contractors to do their work, and making the country pay heavily in consequence.

THE NEW RADICAL MOVEMENT.

The new Radical movement which has just been set afoot for stirring up the agricultural classes, is being pushed on vigorously, not to say recklessly. The recent strikes among the laborers, and the high price of fresh meat, have occurred opportunely for this purpose. The strikes have given the laborers a new and strangest sense of independence, and a vague feeling that they are ill used and down-trodden and ought to stand up for their rights. The scarcity of hands has given them a great advantage, and during the harvest they have in most cases been able to command their own terms. In some instances the farmers held out, and obtained permission to employ soldiers to cut their corn, and as this checkmate to Unionist projects has been attributed to political motives, it has helped to make bad blood among the laborers. In other instances those who succeeded in getting higher wages for the Summer and harvest months are beginning to find that their power is passing away with the necessity for their services, and that the farmers are disposed to take their revenge during the Winter months. There has been a good deal of foolish speaking on both sides; and a jocular observation by the Bishop of Gloucester, that he hoped the laborers, whom he was cautioning against political or professional agitators, would not duck any mischievous stranger in the horse-pond, has been construed into a deliberate incitement to personal violence, and has been seized as a pretext for retaliation in kind. Some of the milder papers on the Radical side have begun to express fears lest the laborers, if they are not well treated, should take to rick-burning in the Winter. Thirty years ago "Capt. Swing," as he was called, was busy in the country districts, and a good deal of property was destroyed by fire. Unfortunately the laborers hardly need to have such ideas put into their heads, and the journalists who are now doing all they can to excite revengeful feelings on their part will incur a grave responsibility if there are many bonfires this Winter. Hitherto the tie between the farmer and his laborers has been, in theory at least, a friendly tie; the farmer paid low wages, but then he was bound by a well-understood obligation to

The Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton Railroad Company,

The Pennsylvania Company, and

The Grand Rapids and Indiana Railroad Company.

The road is in actual operation and in operation, and extends from Fort Wayne, Indiana, to Richmond, 96 miles in the State of Indiana, and connects the Pittsburg, Fort Wayne, and Chicago Railway, the Grand Rapids and Indiana Railroad, and the whole system of roads under the control of the Pennsylvania Company in Indiana and Michigan, with the Cincinnati, Hamilton, and Dayton Railroad to Cincinnati and Southern Ohio and Indiana. The road is leased for 99 years to the Grand Rapids and Indiana Railroad Company, and operated by it for the joint account of the guarantors, and by a contract entered into between the Grand Rapids and Indiana Railroad Company, the Pennsylvania Company, lessees of the Pittsburg, Fort Wayne, and Chicago Railway, and the Cincinnati, Hamilton, and Dayton Railroad Company, for reciprocal interchange of business; all these Companies agree to throw all their freight and passenger traffic which may be appropriately done over this road, thus insuring it, from the outset, a large volume of business. The holders of these Bonds are thus trebly secured:

First—By a first mortgage on a finished road now in full operation.

Secondly—By a contract for interchange of business with three prosperous and powerful corporations, controlling in its favor a vast amount of business.

Thirdly—By the direct and absolute guarantee, jointly and severally, by INDORSEMENT ON THE BONDS by the above-mentioned three Companies.

The whole issue of the Bonds is $1,800,000, or $20,000 per mile, and but a limited amount are now offered to investors. Price, 92 1-2 and Interest. Circulars and information furnished by

TWENTY PER CENT. INVESTMENT.

THE AMERICAN BRIDGE CO.,

OF CHICAGO, ILL.,

G. S. BOOMER, of Chicago, President.

(ORGANIZED AUG. 1, 1870.)

AUTHORIZED CAPITAL STOCK, $1,000,000.

The Subscription Books will Positively Close Oct. 1, 1872.

The whole amount of the authorized Capital Stock of this Company not having been issued, the balance will be issued to subscribers at par, payment for same, to be made in four installments of 25 per cent. each, viz.:

Twenty-five per cent. July 15, 25 per cent. Aug. 1, 25 per cent. Sept. 1, and 25 per cent. Oct. 1, 1872. Past due installments to be paid with interest at the time of subscription.

Books now open at the office of the undersigned will be positively closed at 3 P. M., Oct. 1, 1872.

The total amount of full-paid stock issued at this time is $414,700, and on this basis the Company shows a present surplus of $136,280 97, and is now doing a flourishing business. Over 1,000 men are almost constantly employed in their extensive works, and they now have on hand $2,500,000 of work for various railroads in the United States, among which may be mentioned the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific, Lake Shore and Michigan Southern, Chicago and Northwestern, Missouri, Kansas and Texas, Michigan Central, Missouri Pacific, &c., and the net profit on this business will be over $400,000. The Company is now offered work to the amount of more than $6,000,000, including some of the largest bridges now built in the country; to accept of which and further business necessitates a larger working capital, as immense amounts of material have to be kept constantly on hand, and the Company are frequently obliged to receive in part payment for their work railroad and other bonds, which are perfectly good securities, but not always immediately marketable.

TWENTY ACRES of land in Chicago belonging to the Company, and on which their extensive machine and other shops are situated, is now worth nearly $200,000, and prominent real estate dealers say it will be worth, in five years, at least $1,000,000—an amount equal to the whole proposed capital.

The career of the AMERICAN BRIDGE COMPANY, though brief, has already fully demonstrated the profitableness of the enterprise. The Company has constructed since its organization, and up to the 31st of December, 1871, a total of 8,127 feet of bridges, 18 turning tables and 16 iron truss and pneumatic and screw pile substructures, costing $3,400,000, and have facilities for the construction of pneumatic piles, unsurpassed by any Company in the country, and a capacity for the construction of at least 150 feet of bridges for every working day in the year.

The two railroad and highway bridges at Leavenworth, of three spans of 540 feet each, and the Union Pacific Bridge across the Missouri River, of eleven spans of 250 feet each, were constructed by this Company.

The net profit arising from this business, as shown by the books of the Company, up to the 31st of March, 1872, was the sum of $378,492 14, or at the rate of $2394,069 98 per annum, being over 240 per cent. upon the capital stock then outstanding. With the proposed new structures, machinery, &c., the Company will have much greater capacity, and the proceeds of the increased issue of stock will enable them to buy material for cash, thereby making a saving of from $50,000 to $75,000 per year.

The Company can unhesitatingly, on the above basis, make dividends of from 20 to 25 per cent. per annum on the full amount of capital, $1,000,000, with a fair prospect of a considerable increase.

Subscribers are prepared to give to those inquiring the fullest details and entire satisfaction regarding the reliability of the Company's statements, and the unquestioned integrity and ability of its officers.

We confidently commend to capitalists the above as an investment worthy their attention.

First Mortgage Sinking Fund 30 Years.

SEVEN PER CENT. GOLD BONDS

Interest Payable April and October at the Union Trust Company,

AT 90 AND ACCRUED INTEREST.

This road is the Western link in the new AIR LINE from BUFFALO to CHICAGO and runs from the Detroit River to Chicago in nearly a straight line.

The road is a part of the same line as the Canada Southern and is being built by the same men, viz.: Milton Courtright, John F. Tracy, David Dows, Wm. L. Scott, Henry Farnam, R. A. Forsyth, Jno. N. Burke, M. L. Sykes, Jr., all Directors either in the Chicago and North-west or the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific; George Opdyke, of the Midland Road; Sidney Dillon, Daniel Drew, John Ross, David Stewart, Samuel J. Tilden, Kenyon Cox, and other prominent railroad men.

The Road, like the Canada Southern, will have steel rails (60 pounds to the yard) throughout; is practically straight and level; much shorter, and can be run with greater speed and safety than any other road connecting with Buffalo and Chicago.

Twenty-five miles are finished and running; seventy-five miles more are so far advanced as to be finished by Jan. 1; and the entire road will be completed during the ensuing year. Steel rails and ties for one-half the entire road have already been purchased.

The builders of the road control enough of its Chicago leasers to obtain for it a profitable business from the start, having surpassed the line to accommodate existing business, and having seen the necessity for another trunk line between Chicago and the Atlantic sea-board, located expressly with the view of obtaining the cheapest transportation practicable.

The branch lines will make the shortest connections between Chicago and Toledo, and Chicago and Detroit, as well as between all these points and Buffalo.

The Canada Southern Bonds, in every particular like these, were eagerly taken, the last of them several weeks ago, by the best class of investors, and were on the market a shorter time than any other railroad loan of like amount for years past.

The proceeds of these bonds will complete the entire line, and we recommend them with the same confidence as we did the Canada Southern, and regard them as in every way a choice security.

Running through a section of country thickly settled and producing large quantities of grain and lumber, with not an acre of waste land to be found anywhere in proximity to the road, its local traffic alone will amply secure the cost of building.

The issue of bonds is limited to $20,000 per mile, and we offer only $600,000 on the thirty miles of road already completed and in successful operation.

In view of the above facts, we recommend these Bonds on account of their ABSOLUTE SAFETY, and regard them as, in every way, a choice security. Pamphlets will be furnished on application.
